YANKS SCORE 3 RUNS IN 3RD

By HAVEY BOYLE

FORBES FIELD, Oct. 5.—The New York Yankees, in the first game of the world series here today with the Pittsburgh Pirates, were leading, 5 to 3, at the end of the fifth inning. Kremer, for Pittsburgh, was opposed by Hoyt for the Yankees, both righthanders.

The Yankees enjoyed a big inning in the third when they scored three runs to break a 1-1 deadlock. Errors by Grantham and Earl Smith in this frame, and a walk issued by Kremer, which forced in a run, made the Pirate cause look a little bleak.

Coombs started this inning by grounding out, Grantham to Harris. Grantham, however, fumbled Koenig's roller and Koenig was safe

OPENER CROWD OF ABOUT 44,000 SETS RECORD

By JAMES J. LONG.

The rapidity with which the stands filled after the early crowding of the bleachers gave indications that in at least one respect the opening day of the world series in Pittsburgh would be a record-breaker. That was in the matter of attendance.

Signs were that when the official figures were given out they would show the gathering of this afternoon to have been about 44,000, the largest that ever witnessed a baseball game in Pittsburgh.

Indeed these indications had been in attendance long before today in the excitement and interest that were in evidence on all sides in the unprecedented demand for tickets. Officials of the Pittsburgh club stated today that in addition to 22,000 letters returned without the checks being cashed, 9,000 were sent back after the checks had been cashed after it was discovered there were no more seats to be allotted, and countless telegrams had been replied to, with the statement that the park was "sold out."

Counting the 22,000 who had been allotted tickets, the 9,000 whose checks were returned, and the numerous telegrams that failed to get favorable replies, and figuring that each of the disappointed ones had requested from one to six or eight or ten seats, even though the limit had been placed at four, it will be seen that probably 100,000 persons would have attended today's game if it had been possible to accommodate them.

NEW RECORDS EXPECTED

But it looked as if all local attendance records would be broken in spite of that. The largest crowd that ever witnessed a baseball game in Pittsburgh was 43,810, registered at the sixth game of the world series with Washington at Forbes Field in 1925. There was every indication that today's huge turnout would reach at least 44,000.

When Manager Miller Huggins of the New York team announced two days ago that his pitcher for the opening game would be Wilcy Moore or Waite Hoyt, "in the order named," the majority of Pittsburgh fans declined to take it seriously, figuring that Huggins were merely pulling a little strategic stuff and that he had no intention of starting Moore in the series in his first year in the big leagues, even though realizing that he is quite a pitcher. That they had the right dope on the foxy Yankee chief was borne out before the game today when Huggins admitted that he definitely selected Hoyt to twirl the opener. The selection of Hoyt was in line with the Pirate expectations, as they rate him one of the best money pitchers in the country and had reasoned that he would be the logical moundsman to begin the big struggle.

Instead of being the starting pitcher, therefore it looked as if Moore would be assigned to "bull pen" duty. In the event of his being needed for a relief role. Moore is rated one of the best relief pitchers in the country.

PENNOCK TO PITCH

The condition of Herb Pennock, the star left-hander of the Yankees, turned out today to be not nearly so serious as at first reported, when it was rumored that he would be lost to the Yanks for the entire series. Pennock said that his injury was above the knee and therefore would not interfere with his pitching as soon as the soreness had left his leg.

Manager Huggins said that Pennock would be out for only two days, or three at the outside, and that the southpaw would be able to pitch on either Friday or Saturday at New York.

Pennock himself confirmed this statement, said that though his leg was still slightly stiff, he would be able to work in two or three days.

Rogers Hornsby, Giant captain and who took part in the world series against the Yankees last year as manager of the Cardinals, said before the game that he did not think Hoyt's reputation as a great money pitcher would necessarily hold up today or at any other time in the series.

"Hoyt's strong point is a fast ball," Hornsby said. "He and Charley Root are pitchers of much the same kind as far as fast ball pitching being their forte is concerned. The only difference is that Hoyt pitches his fast ball overhand while Root delivers it with a side-arm motion. The Pirates have beaten Root and other fast ball pitchers like him, and I believe they will beat Hoyt also.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 5.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE promises "to solve the problem of (Mississippi Valley) flood control, so that such a situation may never again have to be met."

It means only determination, which the President expresses, plus engineering ability and money. The country has plenty of both.

SENATOR HIRAM JOHNSON appealed to the convention of union labor in this city yesterday to work for the Boulder Dam project, harnessing the Colorado river for power, irrigation and water supply. He told the union men, "Public utilities companies say they have seven billion dollars of investment, and declare that our government shall not be permitted to build a generating dam at Boulder Canyon.

"If it takes twenty years we'll teach the public utilities that there is something bigger than seven billions of public utilities dollars, and

BUNTS

FORBES FIELD, Oct. 5.—Babe Ruth scored the first run of the series in the first inning. After Bam had singled, Lou Gehrig drove him around with a triple to right.

The Waners put on their famous brother act early. After Lloyd been hit with a pitched ball to open the Pirates' half of the first, Paul sent him to third with a double.

LLOYD, THE LEADING RUN-GETTER IN THE NATIONAL LEAGUE, TALLIED THE FIRST PIRATE RUN A MOMENT LATER ON WRIGHT'S SACRIFICE FLY.

Lazzeri and Grantham appeared on the verge of blows in the second inning when George was forced at second. The umpires restored peace.

The height of something or other in world series etiquette was observed shortly before game time when two nattily clad youths stepped from a taxicab in which they had arrived—to watch the big free score board in front of the Sun-Telegraph Building.

Following his usual custom, Babe Ruth gorged himself with frankfurters before the game. As Ruth munched his sixth hot dog in as many minutes, a stray mongrel which had wandered on the field eyed the voracious slugger speculatively for a few minutes and—then warily trotted away.

Ruth is not as fond of animals as he used to be. Once he believed, with the founders of the S. P. C. A., that the horse is man's best friend—but that was before Herman spent a disastrous winter in Havana.

HOYT'S CONTROL WAS NONE TOO GOOD IN THE EARLY INNINGS. HE HIT LLOYD WANER IN THE FIRST AND WALKED GRANTHAM IN THE SECOND.

Two base on balls and two Buc errors enabled the Yanks to score three runs on one hit in the third.

* * *

Ruth and P. Waner lived up to their reputations as hitters by getting two hits each in their first two times at bat. Paul led in total bases, three to two.

Paul Waner beat out Ruth in the consecutive hit race by singling in the fifth for his third straight safety. After hitting two singles, Ruth grounded out to Grantham.

Kremer was sent to the showers when Lazzeri opened the sixth with a double. Hoyt helped Miljus to get off to a good start in the relief role by hitting into a double play.

Combs, Yank lead-off man, who leads the American League intotal number of hits, looked none to impressive. After flying out twice and grounding out once, he struck out in the seventh.

at first. Ruth followed with his second hit of the game, a sharp single to right, Koenig taking third. Kremer then walked Gehrig, filling the bases, and walked Meusel to force in Koenig. Lazzeri forced Meusel at second, Wright to Grantham, as Ruth scored. Here Earl Smith trapped Gehrig off third, but Earl made a low throw to Traynor, who saved him an error by making a nice pickup. Then Smith dropped Traynor's return throw, Gehrig scoring, Lazzeri taking third. Dugan ended the inning by lifting to Barnhart.

The Pirates got a run back in their half of the third, making the score 4 to 2. Kremer doubled against the right field stands. L. Waner flied out, Meusel dropped Barnhart's fly, while Kremer held second. Paul Waner got his second hit, a sizzling hit to center, and Traynor forced Wright at second a moment later.

More than 44,000 persons jammed the stands to see the opening game of the 1927 series. Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania threw the first ball.

Kremer was driven from the box in the sixth after Lazzeri had doubled to left. John Miljus, Lawrenceville boy, relieved Kremer.

It was a brilliant and colorful assemblage which let out a frantic shout of joy as Combs walked to the plate, the first man to bat in the world series of 1927.

High dignitaries of the state and city and notable figures of the baseball realm were in box seats lining the field of play. In a box, draped with an American flag, Gov. John S. Fisher and his party watched the curtain go up on what is believed to be the most colorful world series in the long history of baseball.

The sun was so pleasant and comforting that the boys out in the temporary stands, sat with coats off. A red-coated band regaled the feverish mob with popular melodies.

The Pirates, in spotless white uniforms, looked spick and span as they trotted out to take their places on the field.

BUCS MAKE BOW

In spotless white uniforms the Pirates came on the field at 12:10 o'clock this afternoon, followed almost immediately by the gray-clad New York Yankees. All uncovered stands were closely filled as the teams arrived on the field and the covered sections of the stands were filling rapidly.

The Pirates started hitting practice at once with Lee Meadows throwing to the batters. The Yankees sat on the grass outside of their dugout and with marked interest watched the Pirate sluggers put on their stuff. In the region of both dugouts the field was black with cameramen who snapped Ruth, Gehrig, the Waner boys and various other celebrities among the contestants.

Augmenting the crowd on the field were numerous souvenir hunters beseeching the baseball heroes to autograph baseballs and programs.

At 12:35 o'clock the Pirates made way for the Yankees to indulge in hitting practice. While the Yankee sluggers worked out Ray Kremer and Waite Hoyt, scheduled starting pitchers, shook hands while movie men operated their reels.

BABE KNOCKS "HOMERS"

Don Miller, collegiate pitcher with the Yankees, threw to the Yankee batters. Babe Ruth brought a chorus of admiring shouts when he hit two successive pitched balls into the right field stands.

Herb Pennock, Yankee southpaw, who was injured yesterday in practice, was out in uniform and limbered up. He said he believes his leg will have recovered sufficiently in a day or two to allow him to pitch against the Pirates.

Two youthful spectators at the opening game were Harold Baker, aged 14, of Syracuse, and Tony Galasso, aged 15, from Sandiego, Cal. These boys were respectively junior and senior champions of the boys' Junior Olympic games held recently in Washington, D. C.

Myles Thomas, Yankee pitcher, formerly of the University of Pennsylvania, pitched to the batters after Miller had finished his spell on the mound.

Umpire Quigley was to work behind the plate, it was announced; Umpire Nallin was stationed at first; Umpire Moran at second, and Umpire Ormsby at third base. Quigley and Moran are National League umpires, while Nallin and Ormsby are American League arbiters.

Among the visitors to the Pirate bench before the game started was Fred Clarke, former Pirate manager, and Hans Wagner. Behind the Pirate bench were National League club owners and a long string of minor league officials.

Rogers Hornsby, noted slugger, visited the press box and made the prediction the Pirates will win the series.

In a blue suit and a nifty brown hat, Rogers in the press coop was intent on uplifting the tone of journalism by reporting the series for a syndicate. Hornsby reported the Yankees were using a Reach ball in batting practice. The Reach ball is supposed to be livelier than the Spalding ball and spies said the Yanks were using the lively ball to impress the Pirates who watched Ruth and Gehrig smear the ball from all corners of the lot.

Gehrig smacked one into the right field stands toward the finish of batting practice, and the crowd yelled its awe.

Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs, the team that was believed to be the winner for a short time, also turned scribe to take a seat in the press box.

At 1:05 the Yankees moved off the field and the Pirates took the field for fielding practice. A mighty shout went up from the bleachers when the two Waner boys took up their places in center and right field.

A box reserved for Gov. John S. Fisher of Pennsylvania was decorated with an American flag. The Governor's box was situated about three boxes away from the Pirate bench.

Clyde Barnhart, Pirate outfielder, was displaying a hunting gun which friends in Carrick presented him.

The Yankees were attired in the conventional gray, which all big league clubs wear while away from their home grounds. After a long conference at the home plate, in which Capt. Traynor of the Pirates, Coach Charley O'Leary of the Yankees, and the umpires went over the ground rules, a mighty shout went up from the enthusiastic crowd as the umpires called play ball. The pulse of the assemblage increased as a white-garmented announcer called out:

"For the Pirates: Kremer and S-M-I-T-H."

The great baseball drama, eagerly awaited for since those glorious days of 1925, when the Pirates defeated the Washington Senators, at last was begun.

The noise was deafening after the band had played the national anthem and Old Glory was unfurled to the pleasant October breeze.

Cowbells, horns and laughing shouts burst forth as the trim Pirates gracefully trotted out to their positions.

Kremer, the main hope of the Pittsburgh crowd, tall and strong, brought an extra cheer as he walked steadily from the Pirate dugout, picked up his glove near the first base line and went out to throw the five preliminary pitches, before facing Coombs, the first Yankee batter. Umpire Quigley adjusted his mask and signaled he was ready for the play to begin. Coombs sent a long, high fly to Barnhart in left field. The crowd waited tensely until Barney made the catch. A little nervous, he juggled the ball slightly, but held on to it. The crowd cut loose again when Koenig fanned. Ruth, the mighty, got the first hit of the series, a clean single to right. Ruth, on first, took occasion to pat in a friendly fashion his old friend Joe Harris, Pirate first baseman. Gehrig, with the count of three and two, dropped a short fly to right. Paul Waner, after a desperate run, could not reach it and the ball rolled past Paul for a scratch triple.

There was not a Pirate sitting on the bench as Ruth scored. In front of the bench was standing Donie Bush, Pirate boss, and clustered around him like chicks around a hen were the Pirate reserves, all tense. Meusel ended the inning with an easy fly to Paul Waner.

Now the fans made ready to cheer one of their idols, Pee Wee Waner, and when the kid centerfielder walked bravely to the plate, swinging two bats, the stands rumbled and roared. With the count two and two young Lloyd was barely flicked with an inside ball. He went to first base. Barnhart got an ovation, too, and then lined to Ruth.

Paul Waner sent the crowd into new spasms with a clean double to right which sent his brother to third. It was the old brother act to which Pirate fans have become accustomed. run, which tied the score, after Glenn run which tied the score after Glenn Wright sent a sacrifice fly to Coombs. Paul Waner took third after the catch. The fans in their nervousness were no different from Manager Bush on the coaching line, who tugged at his cap, his trousers and spat excitedly upon his ever-moving hands. Ruth made a nice catch of Traynor's fly close to the right field line. The whole Pirate bench ran out to see Ruth make the catch.

Oakland was astir early and the streets contiguous to the ball park throbbed and hummed with nervous humanity prior to the opening of the gates at 9 o'clock.

FIGHT AVOIDED

Lazzeri, attired in a red shirt, fouled to Traynor. When he went to the plate, first Yankee up in the second, Dugan, who crouches at the plate, sent an easy fly to Grantham. Collins drew a walk, but the crowd was not excited, as Hoyt, the pitcher, went to the plate. They figured Hoyt would be weak against Kremer. Hoyt, however, annoyed a little, as he worked Kremer to a three-and-two count before he grounded out, Grantham to Harris.

Grantham led off for the Pirates in the second. After getting two strikes George looked at four bad ones to get his base. Joe Harris followed, and thoughts of the crowd, no doubt, were on the achievements of Joe when, as a Senator in 1925, he gave the Pirates all kinds of trouble with his mighty bludgeon. Harris, however, hit into a double play. Lazzeri got Joe's grounder, tagged out Grantham running in to second and then Lazzeri threw to Gehrig at first.

There was a threat of fight when Grantham and Lazzeri had some words over the play, but the umpires moved to the scene of threatened disorder and the trouble was over. Earl Smith ended the inning by grounding out to Lazzeri. As Lazzeri ran in to the Yankee bench after the inning was over some of the fans gave him a round of boos. What he had done was unknown, but the fact that Grantham had objected to whatever it was was sufficient cue for some of the boys to yell at push 'em up Tony.

Grantham, still a little upset, got Coombs' grounder and threw the Yankee outfielder out in the third, but he followed this by booting Koenig's grounder for the first error of the series. Ruth shot a sharp single to right, sending Koenig to third. The fans were worried with Gehrig, home run slugger at bat.

Gehrig walked. Here were three men on base and only one out. A pall was over the buzzing fans. Meusel, tall left fielder of the Yankees, went to the plate in this clinch. The crowd was yelling to Kremer what encouragement it could. There was a moan when Meusel walked, forcing in Koenig, with the run that broke the tie and put the Yanks ahead. Lazzeri forced Meusel at second, Wright to Grantham, as Ruth scored.

Lazzeri ran toward second and Earl Smith, instead of throwing to second, trapped Gehrig off third, but when Traynor returned the ball to Smith to get Gehrig, Earl let the ball get away. Gehrig scored and Lazzeri moved to third on the error. Dugan lined out to Barnhart to end the inning. In this inning Grantham and Smith gave Kremer support none too good, and, to make matters worse, Kremer himself was a little unsteady.

Kremer started the third with a double to right. Lloyd Waner flied to Meusel. Then Meusel dropped Barnhart's fly, Kremer holding second. Paul Waner singled to center, scoring Kremer, Barnhart stopping at second. Wright forced Paul Waner at second, Lazarri to Koenig. Barnhart moved to third. Traynor forced Wright at second, Koenig to Lazzari.

The Yankees made another run in the fifth when Koenig led off with a double to right and moved to third on Ruth's infield out and scored on Gehrig's sacrifice fly to Paul Waner.

The Pirates went into their half of the fifth three runs behind, but fighting gallantly. Kremer fanned, but L. Waner doubled to left. Barnhart singled to left, scoring Lloyd Waner. Paul Waner got his third hit of the game, a scratch hit off the pitcher's glove, sending Barnhart to second. Wright flied to Combs and Barnhart took third after after the catch. The crowd pleaded with Traynor for a hit, but Pie's best effort was a fly to Combs in center, ending the inning.

Lazarri opened the Yankee sixth with a double to left. Barnhart got a bad start on the ball. At this point Kremer was relieved by John Miljus.

After Lazzeri had doubled to start the sixth, Kremer was lifted in favor of Miljus. Dugan sacrificed Lazzeri to third, Smith to Grantham. Collins drew a walk, but Hoyt hit into a double play, Wright to Grantham to Harris. This ended the inning.

Gehrig made a nice stop of Grantham's grounder to start the Pirate sixth, Joe Harris sent an easy fly to Ruth and Earl Smith died the same way.

COOLIDGE DRAWS THRONG TO FOUNDER'S DAY FETE

Announcement was made at the office of the president of Carnegie Institute last evening that the requests for tickets for the Founder's Day celebration were far beyond the capacity of the Music Hall. Approximately 20,000 requests for tickets have been received and the seating capacity of the hall is 2,000. The annual celebration of Founder's Day is an event always free to the people of Pittsburgh, and a request for tickets in the past has always met with attention. This year the visit of President and Mrs. Coolidge to the institute, and the fact that the President is to deliver the Founder's Day address, has caused the unusually large number of requests.

OPENING CROWD IS RECORD

I am picking Pittsburgh to win the series, though, of course, it will be decided by the breaks.

"I think Pittsburgh pitchers will be able to stop New York sluggers. Kremer is as good a pitcher as to be found anywhere and will no doubt give as good account of himself today as Hoyt.

"He is just the kind of careful pitcher to baffle hitters like the Yankee stars. Don't overlook him nor Meadows either. They are likely to keep Gehrig and the rest in check.

When pitched to properly, Ruth can be stopped just like any other hitter. In the last world series in 26 times at bat against Alexander and Sherdel, of the Cardinals, he didn't knock a ball out of the infield. I do not think the Yankees have batted during the season, as a whole, against pitchers as good as they will meet in this series.

Bush's playing to render Ruth and Gehrig harmless by keeping the bases empty by retiring the first two batters ahead of them would have worked out successfully in the first inning had not Paul Waner made a poor play on Gehrig's feeble fly to right after Ruth had singled. The result was that Gehrig had a cheap triple on what was merely a pop fly and Ruth scored on the poor play.

WANERS PUT ON ACT

The Waner brothers partly staged their famous act in the very first inning when L. Waner went to first, being hit by a pitched ball, and, following Barnhart's out, Paul Waner drove his brother to third with a double to right. L. Waner would have scored on the hit had not Ruth been lucky enough to get a perfect rebound off the right field wall. This held Lloyd at third, but he tied the score a moment later when he crossed the plate on Wright's long sacrifice fly to Combs.

A former Pirate pitcher in the person of Al Mamaux bobbed up in the series as a special correspondent for an eastern paper. The former Dormont boy has been pitching for Newark in the International League. He says he is not anxious to come back to the big league as he is perfectly satisfied in the minors. It is rumored he has been drafted by one of the Boston clubs, but this proves erroneous.

The first near excitement came in the second inning when Harris hit into a double play after Grantham had walked. Lazzeri and Grantham appeared on the verge of blows after a collision and a wrangle at second base. The umpire stepped in and restored peace.

Though Kremer prevented Ruth from making any of his long, sensational hits, the Bambino succeeded in making clean singles on his first two trips to the plate, both hits figuring in the scoring. Much of Kremer's trouble in the second inning was due to the errors of Grantham and Smith. Otherwise he might have escaped without allowing a run.

The crowd experienced its first keen disappointment in the sixth inning when Remy Kremer, ace of the Pirate pitching staff, who had been confidently counted upon to pitch the Bucs to victory in the first game, had to be taken out after Lazzeri had doubled in the sixth. Johnny Miljus, Lawrenceville boy, was sent in to relieve him.

NORTH CHARLEROI GETS ANNEXATION PETITION

CHARLEROI, Pa., Oct. 5.—Petitions favoring and opposing the annexation of North Charleroi borough to Charrleroi were presented to the North Charleroi Council Tuesday night. Those favoring annexation asked the councils of Charleroi and North Charleroi come to an agreement so that the proposition may be submitted to voters at the next general election. A petition urging consolidation also has been submitted to the Charleroi Council.

BELLEVERNON TO OPEN NEW GLASS FACTORY

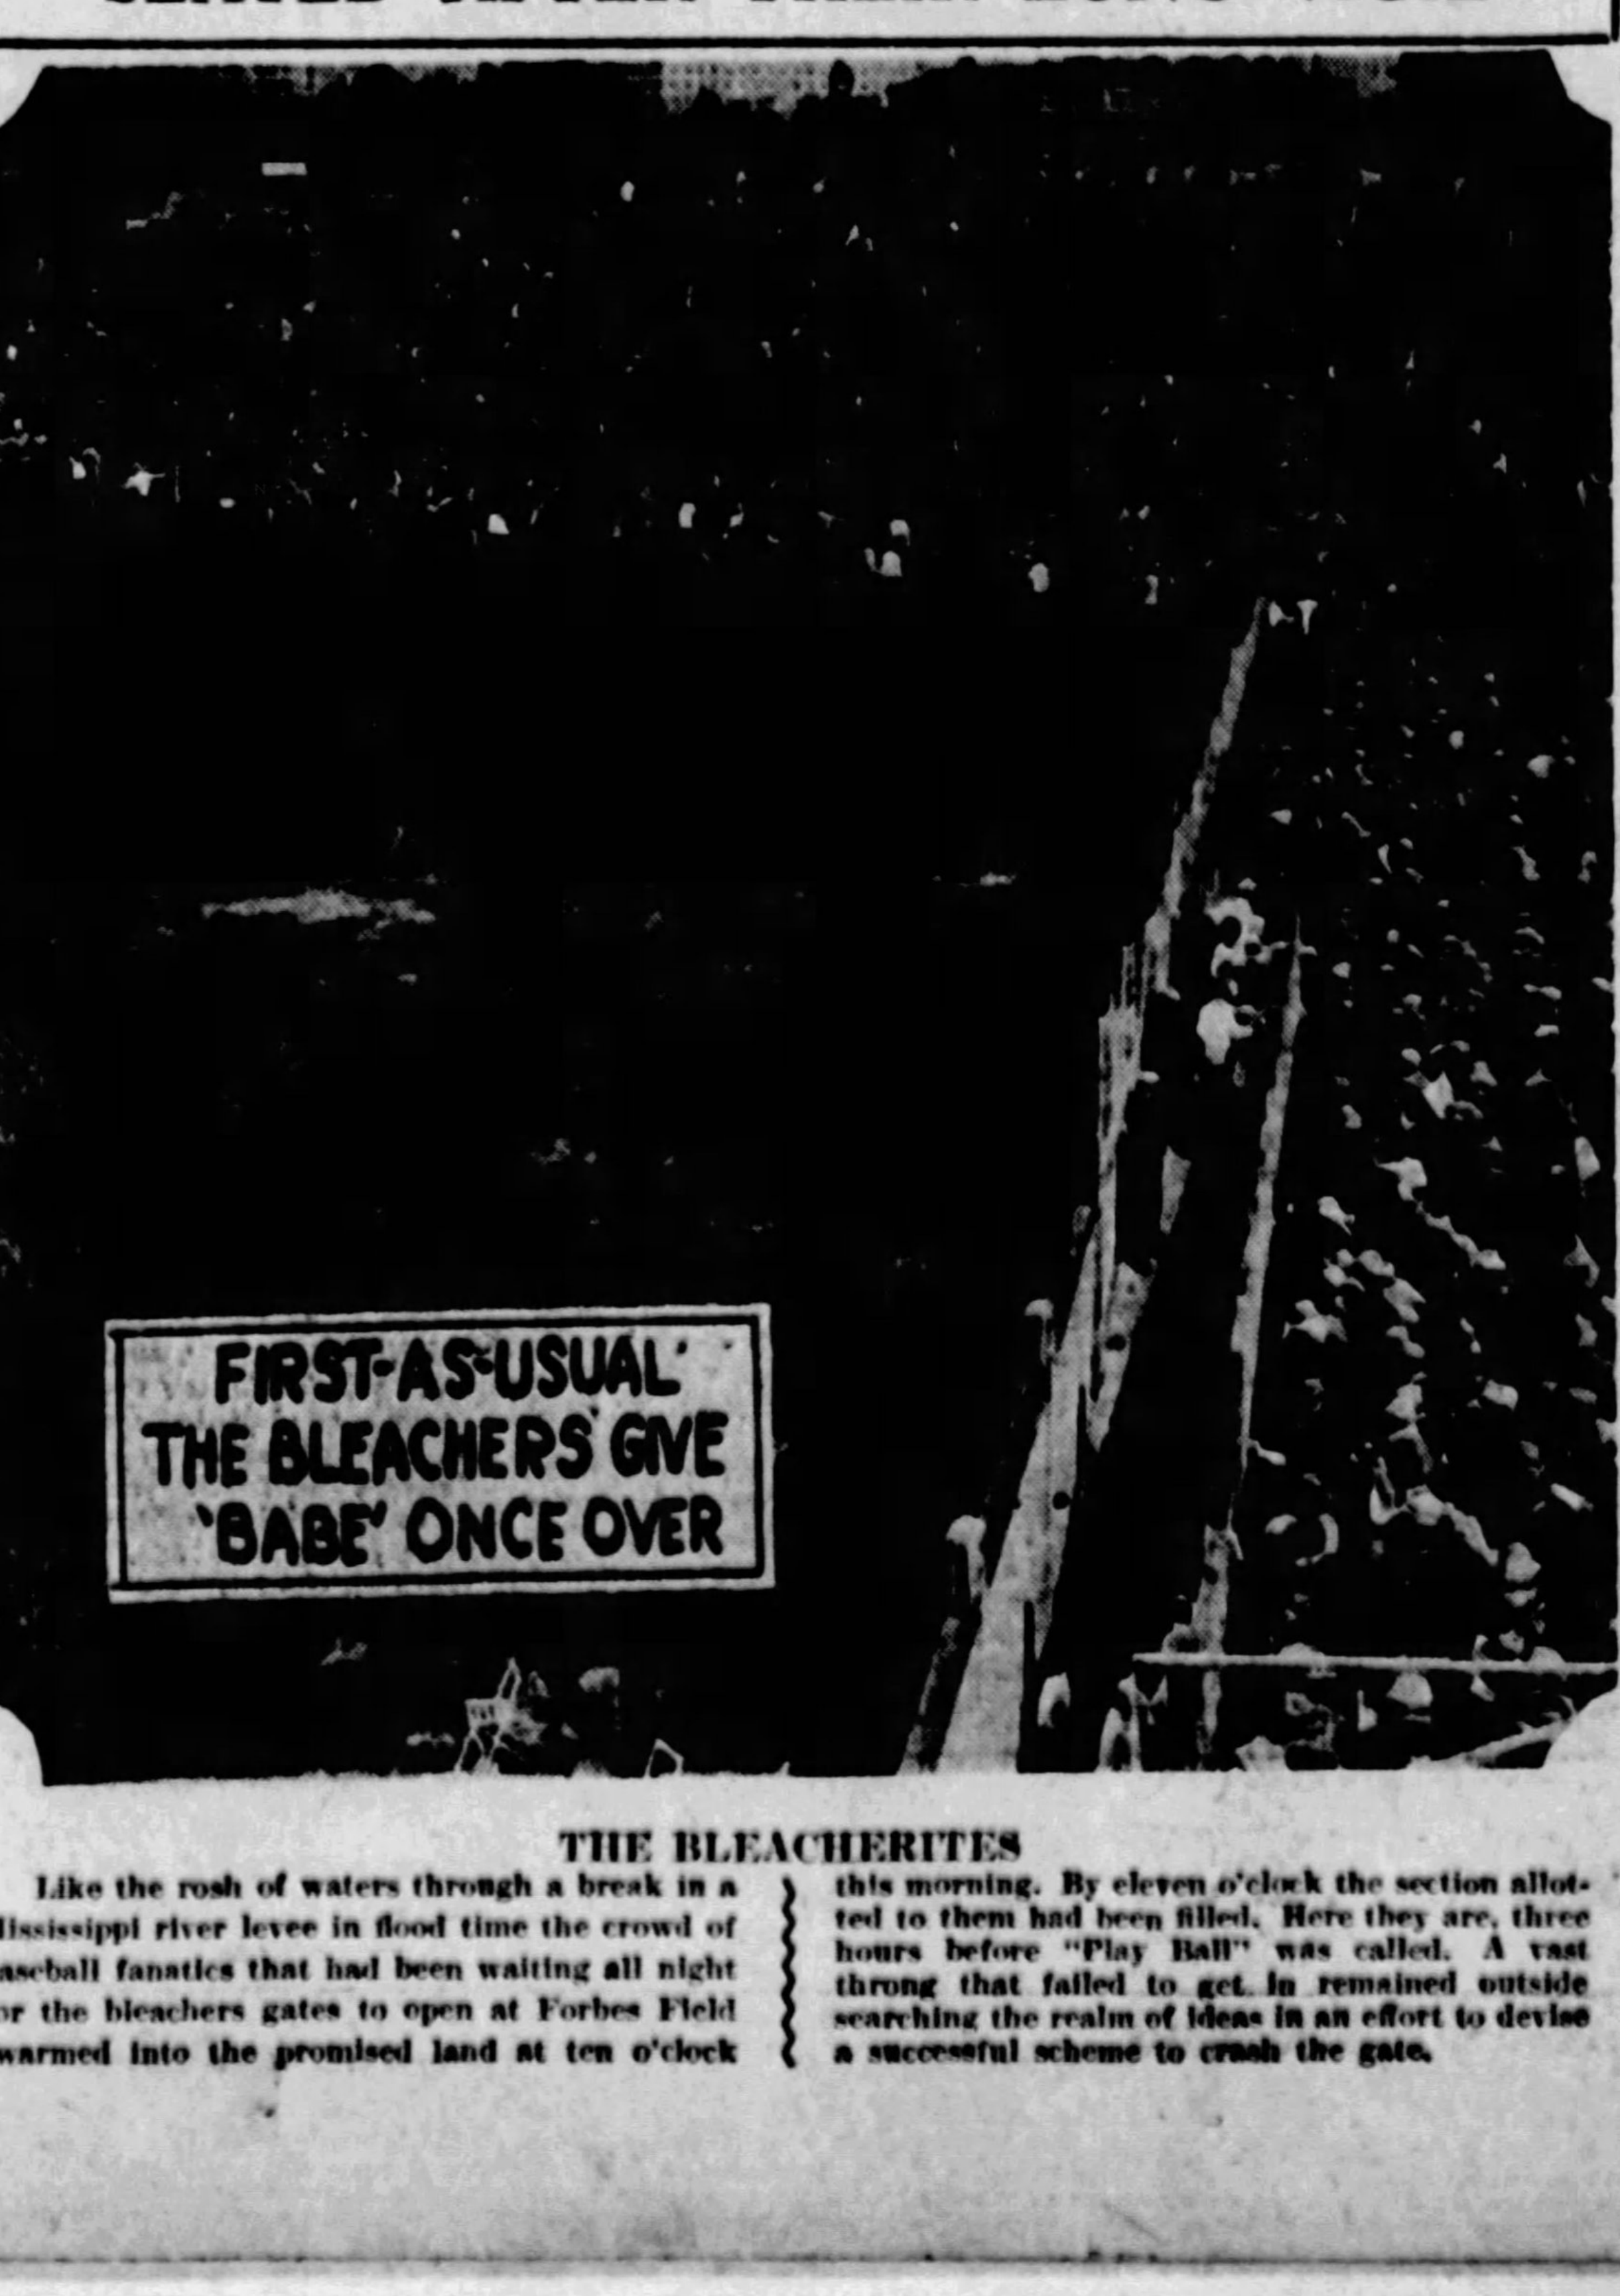
BELLEVERNON, Pa., Oct. 5.—The new plant of the American Window Glass Company, employing about 500 men, will be opened next week. During the past summer the plant was reconstructed at a cost of $450,000 to manufacture sheet glass by the Focault method.

FIRST OF FAITHFUL AWAIT "PLAY BALL"

CHEATING THE CLOCK
SOLID COMFORT
FIRE! FIRE!

The sun peeped over the hills today to find a murmur as of an army bivouaced welling up to the heavens from the Oakland district, wiped the morning mists from his eyes, and perceived that it was the first crowd of the world series disturbing the nocturnal calm. His coming found this vanguard in strange attitudes of suspense, varied according to the particular nature of their weariness and the means they had found to relieve it. Some, as in the top picture, matched the blandishments of Lady Luck against the oppression of Father Time. Many found the warmth of a fire the best answer to the prevalent question: "When will it be daylight?" And, then, as you see by the youth at the left, some just did as they pleased.

SEATED AFTER THEIR LONG VIGIL



FIRST-AS-USUAL THE BLEACHERS GIVE 'BABE' ONCE OVER

THE BLEACHERITES

Like the rosh of waters through a break in a Mississippi river levee in flood time the crowd of baseball fanatics that had been waiting all night for the bleachers gates to open at Forbes Field swarmed into the promised land at ten o'clock this morning. By eleven o'clock the section allotted to them had been filled. Here they are, three hours before "Play Ball" was called. A vast throng that failed to get in remained outside searching the realm of ideas in an effort to devise a successful scheme to crash the gate.

EARLY BIRDS GATHER FOR TICKETS

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

At last. The answer to that annoying question now accumulating whiskers from over-use, namely: "Who wants a worm, anyway?" You've heard it, of course.

Thousands and thousands of early birds were at Forbes Field at 6 o'clock this morning craving the li'l worm. As a matter of fact, they were fighting for it. Among them were several pretty w men and girls, daintily swathed in blankets with hot water bottles and thermos bottles adding to the comfort of the picture.

And they had come from various parts of the country to wait all night in line. Which brings forth another question. Since when is baseball a man's game?

There was Ethel Matheson and Marion Wurth, pretty lassies from Escanaba, Mich., who drove all the way alone to "see the Pirates beat the Yanks." They have never seen a world series. Ethel and Marion said:

"Gosh! If those Pirates of yours don't beat the Yanks we won't be able to buy gasoline to go back with. We have all our money up on them."

One local girl turned her blonde locks to the wall and blushed:

"For pity's sake! Don't let an ne know I'm crazy enough to wait in line from 6 o'clock in the morning for a ticket to a ball game."

Three girls from Akron posed, but insisted upon remaining incognito because:

"Our mamma's don't now we are such tomboys and might spank us when we get home."

They had waited all night. But it wasn't their first world series experience. They came two years ago, too, and say they wouldn't miss being here even if they get the spanking.

Mrs. Pauline Gnau of 201 Gross street sat on a box with her feet on another box, a blanket over her lap and feet, steamer-rug fashion. She had kept watch in line since 8 o'clock last night and her eyes were red from sleeplessness. But she informed us:

"I have never seen a world series and I'd like to see anyone stop me from seeing this one! I have never wanted to see anything so much in my life."

"Why do you want to see it badly enough to wait all night?" she was asked.

Mrs. Gnau laughed.

"Well, first I want to watch the Pirates win. And secondly, I want to see why it is that so many other thousands and thousands fight like demons to get to a series."

Mrs. J. E. Chambers, pretty brunette, and her young husband sat on a large box with a blanket over their laps, playing c rds. They had been there since 7 last night, foregoing the comfort of their home at 1728 James street for the cold night air of Forbes Field.

TODAY

that is the government of the United States."

FORMERLY labor, even in America, would have opposed power development by government, lest it "take bread from mouths of working men."

American labor is too intelligent for that now. In China when the British built an electric road up a steep grade they had to promise to haul only passengers, no freight. Chinese coolies, men and women, wanted to carry the freight on their heads and backs.

SOME of our big companies fear national improvement as the Chinese do. They will get over it, and realize that what helps the country helps all big and little interests in the country.

At present they are the biggest power in the country, and prove it by holding back whatever does not please them.

THERE was "buying power in the stock market" yesterday. Somebody bought 540,900 shares of the new General Motors stock and sales totaled 3,147,300 shares. The three-million-share mark has been passed only nine times in the history of the Stock Exchange.

THE "social surplus" of this country is ten billion dollars, which means that the American people earn each year ten thousand millions more than they need to live on. Wall Street will see bigger days, and stock brokers bigger prices for their seats.

Stock brokers warn customers "to adopt a most conservative market policy," not knowing what else to advise. The best advice is, "Don't gamble and don't sell short."

MRS. SARAH O. DRAPER, starting her one hundred and second year, tells the world that smoking and dancing have kept her alive.

She is right about the dancing.

A British scientist proves that prosperous men die too young because nearly all stop exercising after 50. An old horse in a pasture where he can exercise will live many years. Pen him in a box stall, he soon dies.

FOR many generations France has rewarded with prizes, parades and pretty dresses the "good girl" of the village, called La Rosiere. Often the Rosiere is good and pure 100 per cent, but more good than beautiful. A rich Frenchman will give prizes for GOOD LOOKING Rosieres. A girl that can be good AND good looking, this Frenchman thinks, deserves an especial prize.

Here we have thousands such, and somebody should give a prize to the girl with the best brain. We have plenty of pretty faces and legs, and frequently crown them "Queen."

MEXICO has a lively presidential campaign. In Mexico City yesterday Gen. Alvarez, President Calles' chief of staff, announced the execution of Serrano, one candidate, with 14 of his followers. They were shot as rebels.

Our campaign next year will not be as exciting. It will not be dull.

LINES GROW AT ZERO HOUR

Haggard, but jolly, thousands of baseball enthusiasts, stretched out in three long queues from the bleachers gates at Forbes Field, saw the sun break through the fog over Schenley Park this morning. A thousand had been waiting all night, close to a hundred since yesterday morning, and when the gates opened at 10 o'clock it was estimated 10,000 fans were in line. There were men and women of all descriptions in the crowd, and they came from many states.

First in line was Lester McMichael, 18, of Connersville, Ind., who, with the help of passing motorists, had beaten his way to Pittsburgh expressly to see the world series. He took his stand just 14 minutes ahead of Ralph Arkle, of 219 Corry street, who was first in line at the series two years ago and coveted the distinction this year also. McMichael is rooting for the Yankees. Arkle is a Pirate fan. P. A. Bogler, of Pittsburgh, third in line, and Bill Peters, of Baltimore, fourth, who hiked to town with a pup tent on his back, also are backers of the Buccaneers.

The first woman in the queue declined to give her name. The next was Mrs. F. J. Flaherty, of Pittsburgh, who took her stand early in the evening. Well towards the front was a Knoxville girl, who was fearful that her father would find her and give her "a good bawling out," but was determined to see at least the first game at any cost.

PICTURESQUE

Scores of youngsters had taken good places in the line for the purpose of selling them. Choice locations commanded $5. Friends of the boys passed up and down remote parts of the line, offering to sell preferred places.

Early this morning the scene was animated and picturesque. Hundreds had brought boxes with them and others were seated on camp stools which a vender hawked at 50 cents each. But the majority were standing. Bonfires were burning along Sennot street and on the sidewalk all the way into Schenley Park. Some fans were playing cards. A girl, standing, was engrossed in a novel. A mountain of newspapers was piled up on Boquet street to supply the demand.

By 8 o'clock one queue had extended past the great fountain in Schenley Park and almost to the bronze statue of the Spanish War veteran.

MANY IN AUTOS

At that hour it was estimated that 2,000 automobiles were parked in Schenley Park at the Forbes street entrance. Most of them were from out of town, many from other states, and in not a few cases the occupants spent the night in the machines. Policemen Jerry Hook, Earl Bruce, Terry McCann and Thomas Bennett were attending to the parking of the autos. In the main driveway they had formed 10 long lines of cars. They expected to take care of 5,000. The four men had been on duty continuously since yesterday, but remained good natured despite their obvious fatigue.

An enterprising tailor distributed free doughnuts in bags advertising his business. Hawkers of hot dogs, sandwiches and coffee did a rushing business. There were so many of them and competition so keen that prices were low, some offering ham sandwiches at five cents each.

The Ladies' Guild of the Oakland Methodist Episcopal Church, of which the Rev. Dr. T. R. Coulter is pastor, had stands up in the church lawn along Forbes and Boquet streets, at which home-made pies, cakes and the like were sold for the benefit of the church. Mrs. J. B. Allen of 4367 Schenley Farms Terrace, president of the Guild, said the church sold more than $800 worth of food to the fans at the World's Series two years ago and expected to do equally well this year.

MILLING SERIES CROWDS JAM HOTELS

Scalpers' Tickets Seized and Sold in Court

THE DAILY PICTORIAL THE SUN-TELEGRAPH GENERAL NEWS SECTION
WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1927

MOB FIGHTS FOR DUCATS AS OWNERS MOAN

Merciless scalping of the scalpers marked the closing scene at Central Police Station today in the 1927 drama of world series ticket speculation in Pittsburgh.

Grabbing his hat, Magistrate George M. England remarked that he was going to Forbes Field. He left his office without announcing his decision in the case of six alleged scalpers arraigned before him. Left in the lurch, Attorney Harry Miller, counsel for the defendants, sold 42 sets of seized tickets at face value over the rail in police court, took out his fee and gave the balance to his fearful clients.

A riot almost resulted when it was shouted that the tickets would be sold. The decision to offer the pasteboards at regular rates came after a conference between Attorney Miller and Assistant City Solicitor Harry Diamond, and there was a wild rush to the mezzanine floor, where Miller, in the role of ticket-seller, disposed of his wares.

"The line will form on the right," bellowed police court attaches, but the crowd assailed Miller with a flying wedge. Tickets for the first and second games were sold in a few minutes, but nobody wanted the strips for the sixth game. The noise of the bargain-buyers was drowned by the "squawks" of the six men arrested on the scalping charge.

"We're gypped," they cried. "Here we are left with tickets that nobody wants and the judge has left and we can't get back our forfeit money. This is a gyp town."

The magistrate's clerk told the men that they would have to wait until after the ball game to learn the decision in the case. The defendants are Max Cohen, Frank Barbieri, Joseph Caplan, A. Abrams, New York; J. Harris, 31, of 238 Diamond street, and Harry Cohen, 20, of Philadelphia.

Three ticket scalpers, who had believed themselves protected by Federal licenses as they advertised and sold their wares in downtown buildings, were fined $100 each today by Alderman A. M. Maaloney.

The fines were imposed under a city ordinance requiring a transit vendor's license costing $100 a month in addition to the Federal license for operating in the city.

Those fined were Irving Mandel of 602 Diamond street, alleged employer of Charles Kipnis of 344 Diamond street, and M. Solomon of 602 Diamond street; Nat Pincus of 238 Diamond street, alleged employer of M. J. and Sam Harris, and Frank Barbiere of 411 Smithfield street, alleged employer of Max and Harry Cohen. Only the principals were fined.

Mandell's case was appealed by his attorney, Louis Little. The other two paid.

Following the drive by police yesterday, world series ticket scalpers had run to cover today. Only one little shop could be found downtown where the sale of tickets was advertised. This was a shoe-shining stand at 402 Diamond street, but queries about prices brought forth the information that "the man with the tickets isn't in just now." Persons in charge didn't know when he would return nor did they know anything about prices.

At 238 Diamond street, the restaurant where two scalpers were arrested yesterday, ticket seekers were told "we're all sold out—haven't got a thing today."

In hotels there seemed to be a fair amount of business, but it wasn't being done openly. It appeared that customers must have somebody to introduce them before a scalper could be induced to talk business. At several other places about the city, inquiries brought out that prices range from $37.50 to $60 for "good" seats around Section 19, and $30 for seats in the new stands, for the three games.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company denied today that it had obtained world series tickets for disposal to passengers from New York coming here for the games, as was done for the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago. It was rumored that the railroad had bought, or was handling, as agent for the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, thousands of tickets for the use of eastern patrons of the company. The company, it was reported, was assuring persons buying transportation to Pittsburgh, that they need have no fear of being unable to obtain admission to the games, as it was in position to get them seats.

An official in the passenger department said difficulty was being experienced in obtaining enough world series tickets to take care of the railroad's office personnel. The rumor probably arose, he said, from the fact that the railroad co-operated with the promoters of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in selling tickets for the bout.

Ruth Reforms! Big Breakfasts Taboo

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

HORRORS! The Swatting Bambino has gone and reformed. No kidding. All he eats for breakfast is a big dish of bran, three lamb chops, four pieces of toast and a pot of tea.

Once upon a time the Big Noise sat down to a breakfast of steak, three eggs, a large slice of ham and all the trimmings. But that was before he decided that it wasn't nice to make a "pig out of yourself," in the Babe's own words.

We got all the low down on the High Up of Baseballdom in his suite in the new Roosevelt when we dined with him. Babe, in a bright blue dressing gown and flappy blue slippers, sat down to the morning rite with his little boy grin and stretched. He looked pleased with the world.

"Gosh, I love breakfast."

He stretched again.

"Pardon me, I love my morning stretch, too! It all goes in with the ceremony. And you want me to be myself, I suppose. Must I be formal?"

Put at ease on that subject, Mister Ruth picked up a spoonful of bran—delicately.

"Ugh! I don't like that darn junk. I eat it because it is good for me. Have for years. I like to put berries on it to hide the taste—but the doctor says the berries destroy the good the bran does. So, I eat the raw bran. Ugh!"

He picked up the teacup.

STARVING WOMEN!

(Bluh) "Thass too hot!"

Then:

"Sa-ay, what do you think of the way women are starving themselves? You're one of them! Toast and coffee at 10 o'clock in the morning. You should have worked up a real appetite by this time. Women starving themselves make me tired. Fine generation the next will be if women keep it up."

"Well, what if a woman doesn't like to eat in the morning?"

"Breakfast should be the heaviest meal of the day, I think. I eat two meals a day only. Never have lunch. If I didn't have an appetite in the morning I'd get up and run around the block until I got one. It is the only way to keep well. We waste too much energy when there isn't any food in us when we start the day."

The King of Swat tried to cut a lamb chop and turned his plate over in his lap. He grinned:

"I'm not used to having breakfast before company like this. Can I take these chops up in my fingers?"

He did. And continued:

"It is just as bad for a woman to eat all the time and get fat as it is for her to starve herself. I think both kinds of girls are crazy."

WOMEN ALL RIGHT

"Mister Ruth, we don't believe you like women very well."

He blushed.

"Now listen, I never said I did, did I? They're all right in their place, ain't they? But they're always getting a fellow in dutch. Is this a breakfast or an interview about what I think of women?"

Meekly we switched the conversation.

"How is your little girl?"

His eyes lit with paternal pride.

"Oh, my kid's great: she's a knockout! Oughta see her eat."

"What would you advise a woman who wants to keep thin to eat?" the Babe was quizzed, carefully.

"Vegetables. Lots of them and no meat. Keep away from too starchy things and be a strict vegetarian. And a little exercise now and then goes a long ways toward helping."

For dinner at night Babe has steak or chicken. He "loves chicken." And is "crazy about frog legs."

At the door, when he shook hands and said au revoir, the Big Bambino plead like a small boy begging mamma not to tell papa who cut the cherry tree down:

"Lissen, don't go and tell people I eat ham and steak and lamb chops all for breakfast like some reporters have. Gosh, they'll think I'm a reg'lar elephant!"

SO, Mr. Ruth eats like a gentleman! Only THREE lamb chops and nary a steak in sight.

A VERY DAINTY EATER, IS THE MIGHTY 'BABE'

Alma Sioux Scarberry, feature writer of the Sun-Telegraph, gets the "low down" on the Big Bambino's appetite. And, honest-to-goodness, it is all the bunk about his having such an enormous appetite when he gets up in the morning. He ate a dish of bran (which he hates) three lamb chops, four pieces of toast and a pot of tea. That's all! Having been blamed for eating steak, ham and chops at one breakfast, the King of Swat wants the story denied with vehemence. Dieting women are his pet aversion. They are almost as bad as women who eat too much, he avers.

N. Y. Flyers Pass Over Calais

CROYDON, England, Oct. 5.—A radio message received by airdrome officials reported the Junkers seaplane D-1230 passing over Calais at 6 a. m., headed due west.

The message said the weather was unfavorable. "When the D-1230 passed overhead," the message read, "there was a very thin fog, but since then conditions have become worse."

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 5.—The three-motored Junkers seaplane D-1230 at 5:30 a. m. today resumed its flight to New York.

It took off at Schelling Woudy, near here, where it landed exactly 12 hours earlier from Norderney, Prussia.

The route calls for stops at Lisbon, Fayal, Azores Island; Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and New York.

The plane carries an all war-time German navy crew of four fliers. They are Fritz Loose, pilot; Cof. F. Starke, navigator, and Karl Loewe and Rudolph Flither, mechanics.

MRS. GOOCH AND BABY

Baby John Cleveland "Skippy" Gooch, is seriously ill with what the doctor fears is pneumonia. He is shown here with his mamma watching his daddy play. Johnny Gooch will go into the field with a heavy heart today. But his wife, with Spartan courage, has assured him that the Pirates can't lose and told him to go in and not worry. That everything will be all right.

FARMERS FIGHT HOG SCOURGE

NEW CASTLE, Pa., Oct. 5.—Lawrence county farmers are fighting a scourge of hog cholera which has broken out near New Wilmington. Scores of hogs have died in the last few days from the disease.

Four farms have been quarantined and veterinarians have been engaged to immunize hundreds of porkers throughout the county. The farmers have been asked to tie up their dogs which are believed to spread the disease.

One-Eye Fails to Crash Gates As Sleuth

Caught in the swirl of scalpers' patrons, pass-hunters, curious idlers and more modest gate-crashers, One-Eyed Connelley, professional in the game of "hot air" and free seats, was swept into the detective bureau early today when he asked the sleuths' assistance in getting him into the grandstand at Forbes Field.

Connelley, noisy and breezy, was serious, for the report is that two years ago he met with flat failure at the Oakland ball park.

"Boys, you know the old Scotland Yard stuff—I shine me badge—I want you to give me a little help," pleaded One-Eyed. "If I get through here, I get a two-year contract in vaudeville for 200 bucks a week. It's no trouble for me in New York, and if I bust in here I'll be sitting on top of the world. I took one on the whiskers before, but never again. A little help, boys, and I go through like a greased eel through a knothole."

MINES ON 6-DAY SCHEDULE

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., Oct. 5.—Local mines of the Bethlehem Mines Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, have been raised from a three to a six-day weekly production schedule.

LOBBIES FIND FIRST-DAY BETTING EVEN

Hotel lobbies today were places to be heard but hardly seen. The crush was far greater than the milling which upset the routine during the 1925 series.

"This," said William Jennings Marks, chief bell captain at the William Penn as his right shoulder was more or less dislocated and a left ankle fractured by good-natured lobbyists, "is great. This gang makes the 1925 crowd look like a conference between two vice presidents."

CROWDS WAIT FOR RUTH

The hotel crowds before game time were strange conglomerations of scalpers, gamblers, sycophants and a few notables. At the Roosevelt, the new hotel at Sixth street and Penn avenue, hundreds gathered outside the main entrance awaiting a peek at Babe Ruth, the gentleman who thinks a three-base hit is a total loss.

The Babe fooled the multitudes by slipping out a rear entrance and making for the ball park.

Betting in the lobbies was extremely light and what was done was placed on the individual games, not on the series outcome. The Pirates were an even-money bet for today's game, but the Yankees held the favorite spot for the seven games.

Mr. James Mason, modest manager of pugilists, reported from his corner in the William Penn lobby that Mr. Tunney, the well-known heavyweight improvement, has arrived in town and had invited him to be his guest. Mr. Mason announced he had refused because of the absence of a dress suit and a dictionary.

MOVIE PEOPLE ARRIVE

Buster Keaton and his wife, Natalie Talmadge, registered at the William Penn, hadn't one chance in 16 of smiling their way through the lobby crowd. The cinema humorist was reported as a Pirate adherent.

Gov. Fisher, here to offset any edge Mayor Walker's presence may have given the Yankees, made no secret of his opinion that the Pirates would conquer Al Smith's boys.

Judge Landis stormed up and down the lobby of the Schenley through the morning, patting sports writers on the back and at the same time insisting that even his personal supply of tickts had been exhausted.

Ring Lardner, erstwhile South Bend, Ind., voter, occupied the morning by filling a chair in the Schenley lobby behind a wide newspaper which shielded him from friends anxious to learn the status of his current wardrobe. It was Mr. Lardner who wrote volubly of the shirt he lost in the 1925 series and sympathisers were anxious to forestall a recurrence.

Downtown Fur Shop Looted

Robbers who hurled a padded brick through a plate glass window in the fur store of Leon Applebaum, at 626 Penn avenue, early this morning, took furs valued at $1,000 and disappeared before private detectives, in answer to a burglar alarm, reached the scene, two minutes later.

The loot included a squirrel coat and two neckpieces.

Automobile bandits who blocked the Homestead-Duquesne boulevard, near Homestead Park, with their machine, stopped John Franks, 22, of McClure street, Homestead, a cleaning company truck driver, and robbed him of $100.

Returning home from a shopping trip yesterday afternoon, Mrs. William Lando of 3047 Center avenue found jewelry and clothing valued at $5,250 and a Negro servant girl had disappeared during her absence. Police are looking for both loot and servant.

Service station stickup men maintained their average of about one gasoline station robbery daily when they visited the American Oil Company service station, 929 Collins avenue, late last night. Two holdup men, one of them armed, participated in the robbery, in which Vincent Sloan, 19, an attendant, was backed against a wall under threat of death and the cash register robbed of $25.

Four religious statues, four rosaries, two crucifixes and a candlestick that had been stolen from a display case in front of the store of Miss Rose Wirth, 4715 Liberty avenue, were recovered when police arrested James Dietz of 702 Gross street with the loot early this morning in Friendship avenue. The robbery was reported to police at Forty-third Street Station just before Precinct Detective Joseph Mansky and Patrolman Philip Teets brought Deitz to the station because he could not explain what he was doing with the articles at that time of the morning.

Mrs. Pirate Positive Hubby Will Win

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

Everything is hotsy-totsy, fans. The Pirates will win the series!

We have the positive assurance of all the wives of Buccaneer ball artists that THEY CAN'T FAIL.

All the Pirate wives will be there biting their nails and rooting for their husbands except one—Mrs. John Gooch. Tragedy is stalking the Gooch home, where baby "Skippy," John Cleveland Gooch, 2, is seriously ill with what the doctor believes to be pneumonia.

Mrs. Gooch is by his side constantly and daddy's heart will be with little "Skippy" when he goes to Forbes Field today. "Skippy" wears a four-year-old's clothes and has always been a picture of health. But a month ago he became ill and his temperature has risen to as high as 104.

However, Mrs. Gooch, with Spartan courage, smiles at her player-husband and assures him:

"I know you will win, Johnny. You can't fail. Don't worry about us. We'll be all right."

Mrs. Meadows, who is a close friend of the Gooch family, is so in sympathy that the baby's illness will almost spoil the series for her, she says.

Both mothers saw the '25 series. It was Mrs. Meadows' first, and she declares:

"Nothing in the world could ever give me the thrill that first game did. Lee pitched the opening. I'm sure we have as good a chance as the Yankees—and I have no doubt we will win."

But Mrs. Meadows' face dropped:

"Poor Johnny Gooch. He is so wrapped up in his baby that I am afraid I'll be thinking more about how his heart is breaking than about the game. I've had to see my boy through sickness, too, and I know just how poor Mrs. Gooch feels."

Mrs. Paul Waner will thrill over her first series. Being a bride of such a brilliant ball player is thrill enough in itself. But seeing the first world series, she says, is:

"So exciting I know I'll jump up and yell and be a perfect idiot. I'm so proud of him. Paul and Lloyd and the boys have worked so hard that even if they shouldn't win this series I wouldn't be hurt. The pennant was a big victory. But—I say it wouldn't hurt, because I know they'll win. No doubt of it."

Mrs. Grantham laughs:

"Well, now, I ask you very confidentially, is that sweet? Asking me will the boys win the series. Of course! Don't ask me how I know. Just feminine intuition, I guess."

And she tells about it being her first series and how she listened in from Arizona in 1925 and just about went wild.

Mrs. Harris was amazed that anyone should ask her who will win.

"My goodness! Doesn't everybody know OUR boys will! You sure bet I'll be there. And I KNOW the Pirates are all set!"

Hurray! Where's that other quarter? Here it goes on the Pirates, now that we KNOW.

PITTSBURGH COPY OF ROXY'S LAIR

"ROXY" LEO LEHMAN

S. L. Rothafel, the "Roxy" of the radio and operator of the Roxy Theater in New York, visited his friend, Leo Lehman, general manager of the May-Stern Furniture Company. On a recent visit to New York Mr. Lehman was greatly impressed by the beautiful office of Mr. Rothafel and decided to have one similar for his own. With the aid of Theodore Eichholz, architect, he transformed his office into what resembles a corner of Roxy's New York office. Three art glass windows, showing the progress of furniture manufacture throughout the ages, are features of the office.

SEEK YARROW'S ACCOMPLICE IN GIRL'S MURDER

SLAYER DENIES ANOTHER MAN HELPED HIM

WOODBURY, N. J., Oct. 5.—Another arrest was expected today in connection with the murder of Rose Sario, 17, who was slain Sunday.

After questioning George Yarrow, confessed slayer, four hours yesterday, Sheriff John B. Stratton dispatched state troopers, under Deputy Sheriff Jacob K. Tryson, on a hunt, presumably to bring in a man for examination.

Yarrow had maintained steadily that no one else was connected with the crime, but officials continued to question him because of the insistence of Blanche Sweetin that another man besides Yarrow was standing beside the latter's automobile just before he drove off with Miss Sario.

Police investigating the assertion of Yarrow's mother-in-law, Mrs. Sylvia Michaels, that Yarrow killed his wife, believe the missing woman is still alive. A young woman in Atlantic City said yesterday she had seen Mrs. Yarrow there within two weeks.

Authorities have discounted temporarily the belief of Mrs. Michaels that the woman victim of the "Hilltop thicket murder" could have been Mrs. Yarrow, owing, for one thing, to disparity of age.

SPEAKERS LAUD RADIO HERE

Congratulating Pittsburgh on its achievements in the pioneering of radio broadcasting, speakers at the second annual banquet of the Pittsburgh, Radio Trade Association in Webster Hall last night, at which "Roxy" was the honored guest, urged the radio men of this city to continue their efforts in the furthering of the industry and broadcasting.

Among the speakers were Roxy, who told of the good broadcasting is accomplishing for the orphan, the helpless and the isolated; George McClelland, vice president of the National Broadcasting Company, who spoke of the growth of broadcasting; James Simpson, G. D. Fleck, Philip Carlin and Russell Wallace, president of the Trade Association. Lloyd C. Thomas was toastmaster.

The banquet followed the second day of the annual radio show in Duquesne Garden, at which members of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club will be present today, as will Graham McNamee.

FIND DEAD MAN LYING FACE DOWN IN POOL

The body of an unidentified man was found by McKeesport police today, lying face down in a shallow pool of water in Versailles township. A bruise on the back of the head led police to believe the man may have been attacked and then taken to the pool. There were no marks of identification on his clothing.

Coolidge Believes Debt Cut Biggest Work

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—President Coolidge believes that the huge reduction of the national debt is the one outstanding accomplishment of his administration.

More than that, he believes that wiping out this debt would be the greatest internal improvement that could possibly be accomplished for the welfare of the nation.

This debt, mostly incurred in borrowing the billions needed to finance the World War, has been reduced at the rate of about a billion dollars a year since soon after the war ended. The reduction in the year ended June 30 was $1,131,000,000. The debt remaining totals $18,477,000,000.

The President's attitude was given in the nature of a timely warning to the incoming Congress that he is determined that appropriations must be kept within reasonable limits during the coming session.

Senators and Representatives, it was stated, are already flocking to see Mr. Coolidge in the usual manner to urge the adoption of projects in which they are particularly interested and which involve the expenditure of public funds. While the President feels that most of these projects are meritorious, he is equally convinced that they cannot be undertaken at the present time.

In fact the President believes that the public debt as it now stands is the weakest link in the national defense, actually constituting both a burden and a menace to the public safety.

Didn't Do Right By Our Garlic; Pay $1,000

A jury in Common Pleas Court today awarded Jules Delauney, produce commissioner, $1,000 damages to right a wrong which had been done 28,300 pounds of Mr. Delauney's choicest garlic.

The Pennsylvania Railroad was the defendant. It was over those lines Mr. Delauney shipped this garlic to a customer in New York. It didn't reach there for 10 days and before it pulled out of Harrisburg there was much local indignation, it seems. And, the complaint averred, when the garlic did reach New York the garlic wasn't garlic any more.

COUNCIL, IN ECONOMY MOOD, HOLDS UP BILLS

Council watched expenditures closely at the meeting yesterday. Bills for two bands, one at the dedication of the Robert McAfee bridge, and the other for a Carrick Park concert, contracted by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, were held up for investigation. They totaled $291. A bill presented by Fire Chief Richard L. Smith for his trip to the fire chiefs' convention in Portland, Ore., amounting to $366, was returned for corrections.

DAVIDSON URGES SCHOOL FOR COMMERCIAL STUDY

Dr. William M. Davidson, superintendent of city schools, hopes to see a commercial high school established, with a five-year course and the present plant as the nucleus, he said yesterday in a school talk to the members of the Credo Club of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania in the Chamber of Commerce.

8 ARRESTED IN SERIES OF RUM RAIDS

More than 500 gallons of moonshine, four stills, two automobiles and a large quantity of other contraband was seized, and eight persons were arrested in a series of raids by federal prohibition agents last night and early today.

A 300-gallon still, 200 gallons of moonshine, 175 barrels of mash, 2,500 pounds of corn sugar and 100 pounds of yeast were seized at a distilling plant found in operation on the Martin farm in Wexford. Two automobiles also were confiscated. Nick Rocco, 45, of 6 Poplar way; Phillip Selase, 27, of Wexford; Frank Villoto, 20, of 1829 Dyce way, and Charles Palino, 27, of 820 Wylie avenue, were arrested and released under $1,000 bond each for hearings.

RAID CHICKEN COOP

A 50-gallon still and a quantity of moonshine and mash were seized in a chicken coop in the rear of 641 Ridge avenue, Clairton. Warrants for James and Mary Sestittio were issued after the raid.

In a house at 1858 Cliff street, the agents reported seizing a 75-gallon still, 21 barrels of mash and 140 gallons of moonshine which was concealed under a trapdoor in the kitchen floor. Nick Kelly, 39, was arrested and released on his own recognizance.

A 75-gallon still, 125 gallons of moonshine and 1,325 gallons of mash were reported seized in a garage at Third and Large streets, Clairton. John Sgros, 42, was arrested.

Henry Guest, 33, and Walter Morehead, 34, were arrested in Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, when their automobile was found to contain two five-gallon cans of moonshine. They were released under $2,000 bonds each. The machine was confiscated.

Officials Again Defy Indiana Dry Law

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Evidence that state officials have again disregarded the strict provisions of the "bone dry" state prohibition law in obtaining whisky for sick relatives was revealed yesterday. The Wright law prohibits prescription of whisky by physicians.

Whisky obtained from a friend in Fort Wayne by Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom was administered, upon a doctor's advice, to a sister of the Attorney General while she was in a serious condition following an operation in a Decatur (Ind.) hospital, Gilliom said.

His statement followed word from Decatur that C. L. Walters, Decatur attorney and president of a Methodist Sunday school class, was considering placing the matter before the Adams county grand jury.

Gilliom, who said he was told the whisky was instrumental in saving his sister's life, several months ago petitioned Gov. Ed Jackson to recommend to the next Legislature that the state prohibition law be modified to permit physicians to prescribe whisky as a medicine.

At that time the Attorney General disclosed that Mrs. Jackson had been given whisky while critically ill from pneumonia. Gilliom, in the petition, also revealed that he procured whisky about a year ago for his children, who were ill.

Business Success, She Returns to Asylum

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—After building up a successful business in Troy, N. Y., under an assumed name, Mrs. Mary Folsom, slayer of her husband, has returned voluntarily to the state hospital for the insane, from which she fled nine years ago. She had been confined for shooting Henry H. Folsom, wealthy Boston lawyer, once a Dartmouth football star.

All trace had been lost from the day she disappeared until she presented herself yesterday at the home of Dwight Hall, of Dover, her guardian and trustee of her estate.

"My conscience has been bothering me. I want to go back to Concord," was all she said.

And when the door of the big institution housing this state's unfortunates clanged upon her, there had been written another chapter in the strange story of the six foot, 200-pound Smith College graduate.

Mrs. Folsom originally came under psychopathic attention in 1909. She accused her husband of affairs with other women.

He did not take her seriously at first, but later consulted a physician who ordered her committed to a hospital for the insane at Belmont, Mass. In two years she was released.

The hallucinations to which she had been subjected returned with increasing severity and in 1914 she was persuaded to go to the Folsom summer place at Exeter, N. H.

Mrs. Folsom met the lawyer as he arrived for a week-end visit and apparently she was pleased at his coming. A short time later she was found shooting at his lifeless body.

"Yes, I killed him," she shrieked as she was led away. "He had no business to go around with other women."

She was committed to the hospital where yesterday she surrendered. It is near Dover, where she was born 53 years ago.

Eye-Openers for Waiting Fans Ruled Out

"Eye-openers" for the world series fans, who slept or stood outside Forbes Field bleacher gates last night, caused the arrest of R. H. Francis, 28, of 2840 Sarah street.

With eight pints of liquor concealed in his clothing, Francis was about to begin business at 7 o'clock this morning when police arrested him on a charge of violating the Snyder act.

'UNLOADED' GUN WOUNDS MAN

A rusty old "unloaded" revolver was discharged while two men were examining it in Pear alley, Duquesne, Tuesday. As a result, Louis Burta, 30, 761 Richford street, Duquesne, is in West Penn Hospital with a bullet wound in his abdomen and Eugene B. Cuyler, 1422 Crawford avenue, Duquesne, is being sought by county detectives.

NABBED IN EAST, YOUTH ADMITS HOLDUPS HERE

Glad He's Caught, 'Can Go Straight Now'

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—A young man, giving the name of Francis Heyer and his home at 1198 Lakeside avenue, Akron, O., was in the hands of Philadelphia police today awaiting a hearing on charges of holding up drugstores. Police said he told a tale of drugstore robberies from Pittsburgh to Trenton, N. J., in the company of two men who admitted to him they were former convicts.

Heyer said he had lived a life of innocence until September 24, when two men in a motor car accosted him and asked the road to a small town outside of Akron. They invited him to go along and he decided to go east with them.

HELD UP STORES HERE

In Pittsburgh the trio held up three drug stores and then went to Washington, where they held up a drug store on Connecticut avenue. They did the same thing in Baltimore, and their next job was in Trenton, N. J., where they held up a drug store opposite a motion picture theater and got away with $22.

The three men, police said, then took a fling in the night clubs of New York; went to Niagara Falls and came to Philadelphia. Two drug stores were held up here. They intended to go to the seashore for a good time, and in Ardmore, a Philadelphia suburb, they were arrested for speeding. While in the Ardmore police station they managed to escape, and Heyer was picked up by an Ardmore policeman while he was dozing near a railroad track.

Heyer said he was glad he had been arrested so as to break away from his newly found pals. In all, the trio obtained about $1,200 in their raids, according to the police.

AGED RESIDENT OF OIL CITY DIES

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 5.—John Dunn, 92, a resident of Oil City since 1869, is dead at his home here. He was an elder in the Second Presbyterian Church for 21 years.

KILLED BY TRAIN IN FOG

Confused in the fog, Peter Merriman, 50, Carnegie, section hand for the Pennsylvania Railroad, stepped from one track into the path of an approaching shifting engine at 8:30 o'clock this morning and was killed. The accident occurred near the south end of the Ohio river connecting bridge.

SUES TO FORCE BOROUGH TO ACCEPT PRISONERS

Ross F. Shaffer, constable of Glenfield Borough, filed a writ in mandamus in Common Pleas Court against the Borough of Sewickley, O. S. Richardson, burgess; W. W. Cunningham, chairman of the police committee, and S. Y. McFarland, chief of police, to compel them to accept prisoners in the Sewickley borough lockup. Shaffer claims that he has taken several prisoners to the Sewickley lockup to be detained there for short periods and has been refused permission to have them kept there.

NAB PRISONER'S DOUBLE

By Universal Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Max Gottlieb, 40, faced his double in the county jail, at Mineola, L. I., and the experience almost made him faint.

The double was Abraham Schwartz, 41. He and Gottlieb are so much alike that police, when they saw Schwartz, arrested him under the impression that Gottlieb had broken jail.

Had it not been for Schwartz's arrest, Gottlieb would have gone to prison for life as a fourth offender, having been identified by five persons as the man who sold them bits of glass for diamonds. Police say Schwartz confessed the crime.

The five persons after seeing the two men together today admitted their error and Gottlieb, who has been convicted of other crimes, but was innocent of this, was released.

Park Series Seats Held No Violation of Deed

In granting Barney Dreyfuss the right to erect additional seats for the world series on Schenley Park property, adjoining Forbes Field, Council did not, in the opinion of City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, violate that provision of Mrs. Mary E. Schenley's deed in which she stipulated that the land was to be used as "a public park and place of free, attractive and healthful resort and open air recreation . . . and for no other use or purpose whatever."

Council had not deprived the people of the free use of the land, Waldschmidt held, because the new seats are in the air above the ground, and the citizens still have free access to the ground. Council had only performed a civic duty, he asserted, in permitting the facilities at Forbes Field to be increased, and he had no doubt that Mrs. Schenley, were she alive, would approve.

Daniel Winters, president of Council, justified the grant to Dreyfuss on the ground that it afforded an opportunity to provide additional low-priced seats for the fans and deprived the Pittsburgh Baseball Club of excuse for charging a higher tariff for admission than is being demanded.

Councilmen Harry A. Little and P. J. McArdle expressed similar views.

Denying that the councilmen had been specially favored in the allotments of seats by Dreyfuss, Little showed a certified check which he had sent in payment for tickets and which had been returned with his order unfilled.

CLEAN KIDNEYS BY DRINKING LOTS OF WATER

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

What Men Do To Make Skin Clear And Flesh Firm

A Secret of Success and Power

Of what use are fine features with an ugly, mottled skin, flabby flesh, sunken cheeks, pouches under the eyes or a careworn, sickly-looking face?

If you want to quickly clear your skin and complexion, put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones and look and feel 100 per cent better, simply try taking two of Mastin's tiny yeast VITAMON Tablets with each meal and watch results.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the other important vitamines and are now being used by thousands. They positively will not upset the stomach or cause gas, but on the contrary, are a great aid to digestion, to overcome constipation and as a general conditioner of the whole system.

Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish as if by magic under their purifying influence, the complexion becomes fresh and clear, the cheeks glow with ruddy health, the flesh becomes firm instead of flabby, the eyes bright instead of dull.

Mastin's VITAMON Tablets are positively guaranteed to give you new health, energy, "pep," power and ambition and improve your appearance, whether you are young or old, or the trial costs you nothing. Make the test yourself and see. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VITAMON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet. There is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists such as May Drug Co. Stores all over Pittsburgh.

LIQUOR PERMIT RETURN ASKED

Efforts of the Home Beverage Company of Braddock to obtain the restoration of its liquor permit, revoked by the prohibition department, was made in Federal Court yesterday when Judge R. M. Gibson granted a rule on Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington to show cause why the 1927 permit had been revoked. The rule was made returnable October 24. The act of revocation was taken following the discovery of 62 barrels of beer of illegal alcoholic content in the company's plant. In the company's petition it is stated that Henry Sutter, brewmaster for the company, had assumed full responsibility for the presence of the illegal beer and exonerated the officers of the company of blame.

Fine Coats

A fine coat, here, means one made of a beautiful, flat-surfaced cloth, which may be dull as vellum or semi-lustrous—withal, inconspicuously luxurious.

It means a coat lavishly trimmed with fur, the true quality of which is indisputable, fur which will bespeak the affluence and good taste of the wearer.

It means, in many cases, a coat which is handsome enough to serve as a formal afternoon and evening wrap, as well as for street wear.

Prices on women's fine coats, $100.00 to $495.00.

Ralph Ince Latest Star to Put Gunmen on Silver Screen—Wife Will Play Lead Role With Him

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS.
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.

CHICAGO'S gunmen are just sure to become annoyed if the movies don't stop featuring their little adventures. A gunman can't ply his trade these days without some movie company stealing his stuff for a plot. First it was done in "Underworld," which, by the way, is pretty apt never to be shown in Chicago, and now comes Ralph Ince with "Chicago After Midnight."

Mr. Ince's glorification of Chicago's yeggmen was written for him by Charles K. Harris, author of "After the Ball" and other sentimental ditties. It deals with the happenings in the Loop when the rest of Chicago sleeps. The country has gone mad on underworld tales, and I suppose Chicago is chosen as a locale because nowhere in the world are there gunmen with such picturesque histories.

Lucila Mendez (Mrs. Ince) will play opposite her husband. And this is an event for her, since she nearly kept a date with the heavenly choir yesterday. Her husband, in driving his car, ran over her accidently. She had a very close call, her friends say.

Jane Winton plays in two Marion Davies pictures in succession. If I were writing a headline instead of a simple little item for this family column, that is the way it would be worded. Jane was yesterday chosen for the role of Marion's sister in "The Patsy," the snobbish sister, Grace, who manages to make poor Pat's life miserable. And Jane was as happy over her selection as if someone had left her a fortune. There was a long list of candidates for the job and it was only after King Vidor had conscientiously looked at every test that he made his choice. I really feel Jane had the best chance all along for she does a nice piece of work in "The Fair Co-ed," Marion's latest picture. John Patrick has likewise been added to the cast.

Nationality doesn't matter much when a man has talent. Jean Hersholt is not Jewish; he is Scandanavian—but he knows his craft, which, after all, is the big thing in this picture business. Paramount probably took all that into consideration when they cast him as Solomon Levi in "Abie's Irish Rose." Next to the role of Abie, played by Buddy Rogers, this is the pick of the male characters. Mr. Hersholt is under contract to Universal and before any negotiations were signed a little borrowing conference had to be held. Victor Fleming, the director, by the way, is getting ready to film Ann Nichols' perennial play.

There seems to be a lot of dabbling in real estate among the stars here in Hollywood. Only yesterday Corinne Griffith told me she had sold her beautiful home in Beverly Hills to Mrs. Tom Ince. Corinne doesn't need the money, but selling her house gives her a chance to build an Italian villa modeled after one she saw when she was in Italy last year. A part of the deal with Mrs. Ince includes a tract of land in Benedict Canyon, Beverly Hills. And it is in this choice spot Corinne will build her new home. With all the Spanish types of architecture here in California, the Italian villa will be a novelty. Corinne will not start to build until she returns from New York, where she is going on a vacation as soon as she finishes "The Garden of Eden."

Actors may come and actors may go, but John Bowers seems to go on forever. This little bit of paraphrasing isn't meant as any slap at his age, either, for he is young—but it does seem to me that in all the years I have been picking out letters on the typewriter with one finger he always figures in some picture or other. His latest film adventure is in the male lead in "The Opening Night," by Albert Payson Terhune. More than being a Columbia gem of the "fillums," it has Claire Windsor as the leading lady and E. H. Griffith as the director.

I never thought I'd live to hear any actress deny that she was a Mack Sennett bathing beauty. Most of them look upon this as a distinction to be rated with graduating from Vassar, or Harvard. Alice Day, however, states that she was never a Mack Sennett bathing girl; that she was featured as a Mack Sennett comedienne. I suppose there is a distinction, and, if so, Miss Day is entitled to a correction.

Deep in young Douglas Fairbanks' heart there has always been a yearning to appear before the footlights. I suppose it is in the blood. Now his chance to act on the stage has come, for he has been chosen to play the part of Young Woodley in the play by the same name when it opens here on October 22—the role that Glenn Hunter played all last season. Doris Lloyd, a sister-in-law of George K. Arthur, will be seen in the same play. "Young Woodley" has been banned in England. I suppose because it is not entirely complimentary to English schools.

Browsing around the studios (yes, I do that now and then), I find that blonde wigs are popular. Blondes, in other words, seem to get a better break before the camera than their dark-haired sisters. David Wark Griffith has put blonde hair on Mary Philbin in his Spanish picture and it is very becoming. The Griffith picture, by the by, promises to be a de luxe special. There are still five more weeks of work and D. W. is spending plenty of money to get the effects he wants.

The eight Tiller girls, now playing in the Penn, rehearse two hours every morning. There are really nine of the girls, one of whom acts as understudy and dances when emergency calls.

Lois Wilson, who is Bert Lytell's leading woman in "Alias, the Lone Wolf," showing in Loew's Aldine, is well known for her work in "The Covered Wagon" and other films.

Rockcliffe Fellowes, appearing in the Grand this week in "The Crystal Cup," was born in Ottawa, Canada. He has appeared in scores of popular pictures.

Find "Lost Court" During Picture Production

When a California town discovers it is in Nevada it gets mad. And if the citizens have spent $80,000 on a courthouse to make sure the place would be the county seat they get—well, they get wild. Aurora was the name of the place. It is probably the only community in America that ever discovered itself two miles east of where it thought it was.

Fifty years ago Mono county, Cal., was in the throes of a gold mining boom. Bodie, in the midst of the mountains was a thriving city; Aurora was a wild place with plenty of gold dust, bullets and other phases of a hectic life, and Bridgeport was one of the stopping places for the fast 20-horse-team freight that ran from Carson City to Bodie. There was great rivalry as to which would have the county seat. Aurora citizens contributed $80,000 for a fine courthouse and won.

But Nevada and California had the mountainous country resurveyed, and Aurora discovered it was in Nevada. In 1880 Bridgeport erected a fine courthouse, and it is still in use.

Fred Thomson used Bridgeport as a background for many of the outdoor scenes in his new Paramount picture, "Jesse James." Bridgeport citizens are still chuckling over that Aurora courthouse in Nevada that no Nevada judge has ever seen.

Film Actor Says He's Unusual "Local Boy"

William Austin, Paramount featured player, claims to have set a record.

He says he is probably the only contract player in the moving picture industry who has never had a "another local boy makes good" item about him in his home-town paper.

For Austin was born in British Guiana, South America, where there are no English periodicals.

Austin spent his childhood days on a sugar plantation and was later sent to England to be educated. He came to America in 1915 and has been on the stage and screen since 1919. Austin is now appearing in "Honeymoon Hate," starring Florence Vidor.

Stunt Fliers Cast On Film Sequel To "Wings"

The cast of "Wings," Paramount's aviation spectacle, pleased Director William Wellman so much that he is seeking as many of these veterans as possible to work in the sequel to that picture, "The Legion of the Condemned," which he also is to direct.

The aviators who did stunt flying for "wings" will be back in the new picture. They are Capt. Sterling Campbell, Ross Cook, Ted Parsons and Tom Watton.

Gary Cooper who had a small part in "Wings" is to be the star of the sequel. Voya George will be the heavy. Harry Norton, who appeared also in "What Price Glory" as a mama's boy, will have a part, along with Francis McDonald and Charlot Bird. Charles Barton, who was taken off the studio floor as a property boy to appear with Clara Bow in an important sequence in "Wings,"—the one in the auto truck incident—has been given a featured role.

CATCH BIG "MUSKE" IN OHIO STREAM

UHRICHSVILLE, O., Oct. 5.—Conn White and Francis Lawrence landed a 17-pound muskellunge from the Big Stillwater creek here. This is the record for the season.

YOUR PITTSBURGH
How Well Do You Know It?

The Farmers Deposit National Bank of Pittsburgh is one of the nation's very old banks. It was established in 1832 by a special Act of the Pennsylvania Legislature and became a national bank December 29, 1864.

During the first several years of the bank's existence, the Pittsburgh district was a prosperous farming community and the Farmers Deposit Bank, as it was then known, at once became an important factor in the life of Western Pennsylvania.

Industries soon sprang up on all sides and the Farmers Deposit Bank immediately co-operated in financing and assisting commercial enterprises that are now world leaders. It was the first Pittsburgh bank to erect a large office building. Upon completion in 1903 of its present building, real estate development in the downtown district received a great impetus. The Farmers is today one of the prominent financial institutions of the commonwealth, and numbers among its depositors many of the nation's largest and most useful commercial organizations.

This is one of a Series devoted to some one particular Greater Pittsburgh Institution contributing to the growth of this great district.

YOUNG SWORN TO RESERVE BOARD

By Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Roy A. Young, for some years governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, yesterday was sworn in as a member of the Federal Reserve Board. He will become governor of the board by designation.

Young declined all comment on reserve policies or the fight in the system over the board's enforced reduction of the Chicago re-discount rate.

His assumption of the office will have no immediate effect on the program of low re-discount rates now effective throughout the country, it is understood. Any change of policy would be manifested when the next change of rates is proposed, either by one of the 12 banks or by the board.

He is expected to become an important factor at that time, along with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the board's ex-officio chairman, who was absent when the board reduced the Chicago rate over the bank's protest. Mellon is understood to disapprove of that course, although he is regarded as favorable to the lower rates.

Acting Governor Edmund Platt announced today that the board will renew its recommendation for an amendment to the Clayton act permitting one man to hold directorships in not more than three banks which are not in substantial competition. The existing ban on this discriminates against national banks and tends to prevent, rather than foster, competition, Platt declared.

COUNCIL O. K'S PARK LAND CONDEMNATION

2 HARRISVILLE TOTS DIE IN FIRE

GROVE CITY, Pa., Oct. 5.—Mary Elizabeth, 1, and Irene Marie, 3, children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kibe, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the Kibe home at Harrisville, near here, last night.

After discovering the fire, Mrs. Kibe attempted to go up stairs where the children were sleeping, but was forced back by the flames and heavy smoke. The father was in Salem, O., at the time, where the family planned to move in the near future. Five other children escaped unhurt.

Mrs. Kibe suffered a nervous breakdown after the tragedy and her condition is regarded as serious.

OLD INDIANS SHOT CRAPS AND WIVES USED ROUGE

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Flappers and sports haven't changed much on the American continent. The large collection of Indian relics gathered by Edward Snow proves that the Indians of old gambled with dice and used rouge and powder. Snow exhibits gambling stones which were used in a manner identical with dice. There also are thin, round stones used for counters, like the poker chips of today. Larger round stones were used in lagging for a line, just as boys pitch pennies. In the collection are several rouge pots, from which the redmen used to paint their faces.

CORONER'S JURY STUMPED IN AGED WOMAN'S DEATH

Code of Ethics Merchants Council Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh

THE Merchants Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh has been formed under the by-laws of that organization for the purpose of promoting better business practices among retailers, and to provide for the interchange of merchandising ideas so as to properly serve the public. The Council has adopted a Code of Ethics to which all of its members must subscribe. The maintenance of this code is required as the basis for continued membership in the Merchants Council. It reads as follows:—

> "The corner-stone of Commerce is integrity; the assets of any commercial institution consist of honesty and business character first—and after that, service and merchandise.
> "Therefore, we hold paramount the truth that advertising is a covenant with the public; that the spoken word or printed word is as binding on performance as an oath before a judicial tribunal, as sacred as a personal pledge.
> "It is our pledge to so administer the affairs of our institution that individual service to the customer is not diminished or minimized by reason of volume of trade; that interested personal service, based on the needs and requirements of the individual, is our first aim and chief duty.
> "Mutual exchange of confidence between buyer and seller is essential. We affirm that the history of any article of merchandise concealed beneath trade expressions or symbols, the meaning of which leads the buyer to form an opinion more favorable than would obtain without such disguise, is unfair to the buyer, and therefore contrary to our ethics."

MACKRELL FUND HELPED BY CLERKS

Clerks in the office of Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell contributed $2,378 to his primary campaign fund. It was a "surprise to me, coming as it did as a free-will, unexpected gift; knowing the sentiment that accompanied this contribution, it was a pleasure to accept it," according to a notation by Mr. Mackrell on his expense account filed with the clerk of courts. The balance of his campaign fund of $3,628 came from George E. Meyers, L. J. Sullivan and George H. Calvert, $250 each; and A. E. H. Frazier, Frank Orie, Stanley Orie and Charles E. Schentz, $100 each. Of the expenditures, $3,000 went to the Republican organization, $440 for taxicab and auto hire and the balance chiefly for advertising.

John D. Evans, successful candidate for McKeesport city council, received $1,000 from State Senator William D. Mansfield, the only receipt, and spent $1,121.98. The campaign committee for Daniel Winters, president of Council seeking renomination, received $2,250 and spent $1,784.95, of which $1,300 was given to the organization, according to the account filed by George H. Stengel, treasurer.

Judge Nelson McVicar, apparently defeated for return to the Common Pleas bench on the face of unofficial returns, received no contributions and spent $3,301.34, of which $2,500 was given to the Republican organization, according to his account.

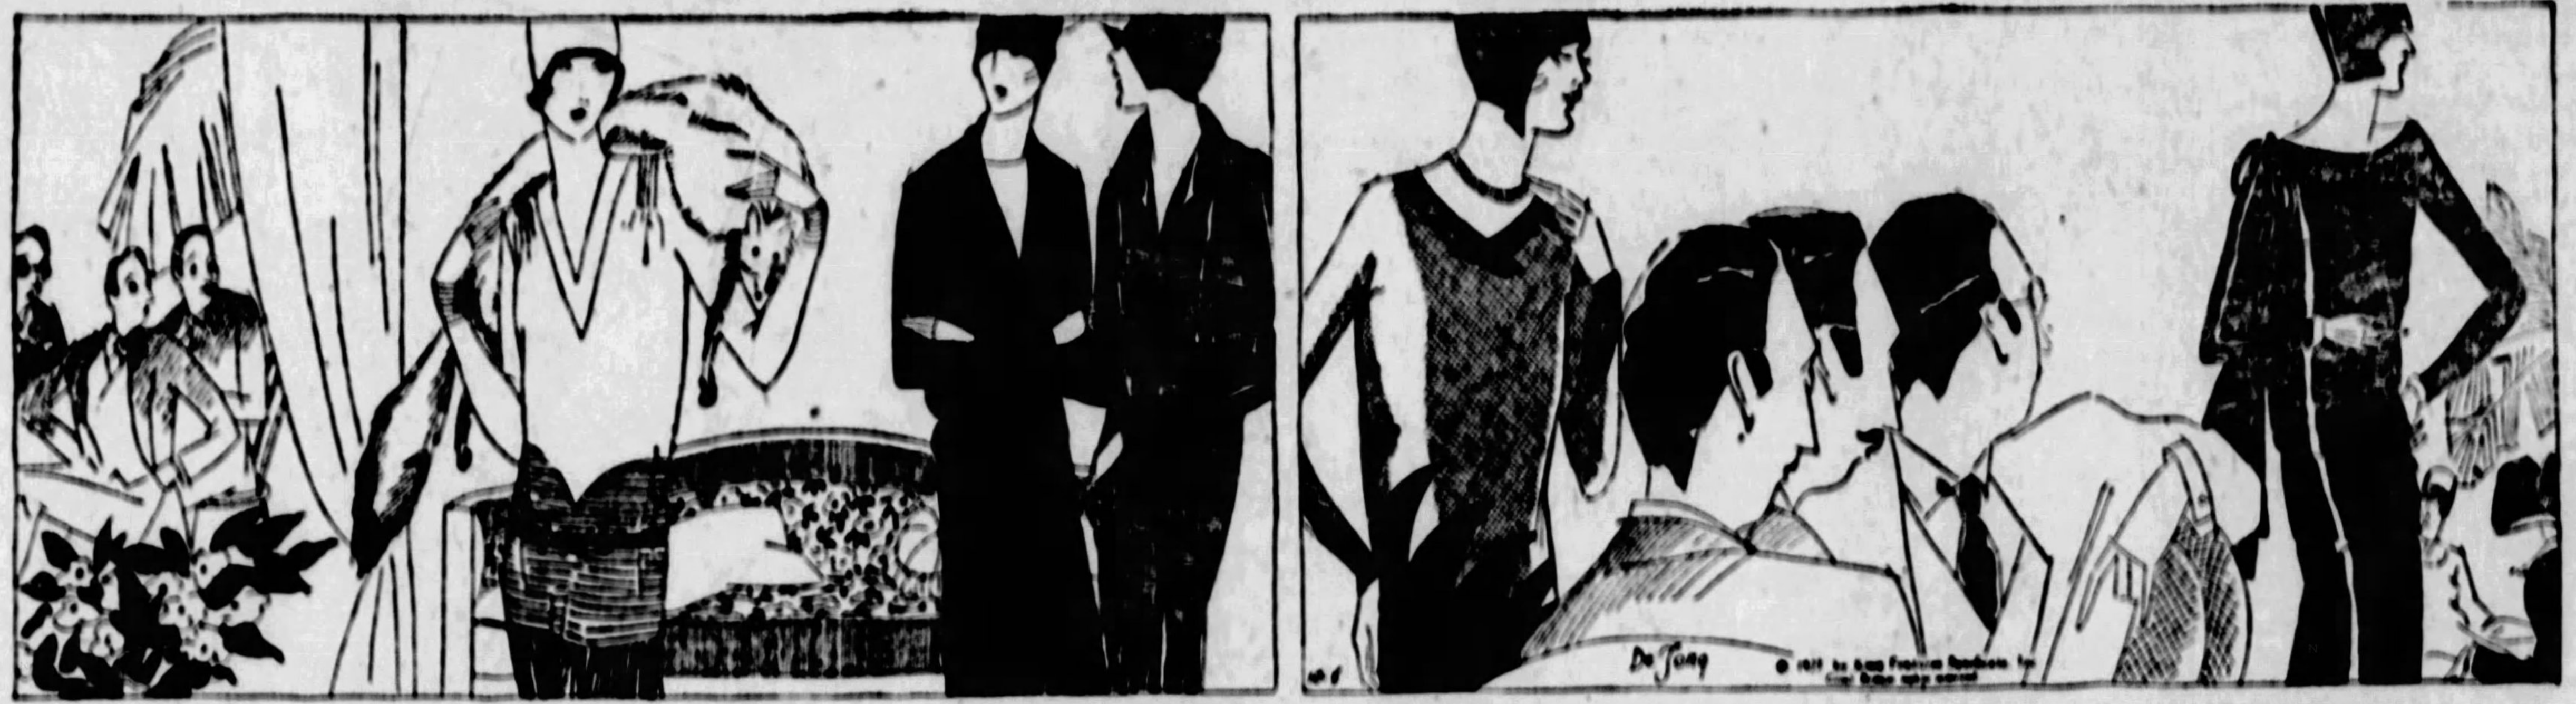
CHIC CHERIE

How Could It Happen?

LATEST FASHIONS



Ernest and Eustace and Edwin are possessing their soul in patience (sure, they've only one soul between them) while waiting for Cherie. They are noting with less enthusiasm than we feel ourselves that the lady to the left is wearing a dress most artfully trimmed with tucks and pleats. They don't know it's made of a new fabric—wool georgette. The very tailored frock next door is a suit of velveteen whose softly bloused jacket has the new moulded shoulders. Third of the ladies, who are not Cherie, is the one wearing a completely correct Full frock of crepe satin with alternate stripes of both surfaces.

Cherie has just come in at the left in a dress that is surely an excuse for being late—a frock of silk crepe trimmed with odd sprawling leaf fronds of velvet and topped by a guileful velvet hat that comes lopsidedly down over one ear. Imagine her consternation, then, when Ernest and Eustace and Edwin fail completely to see her enter! And imagine her annoyance when she sees that this absent-mindedness is due to the lady to the right who is wearing, very effectively, a frock of crepe satin with a swathed hipline and a single drooping shoulder scarf. Is this mutiny or desertion, or both together?

Getting a Husband

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"HOW can I win a husband?" This in substance is the question Rose asks, in her letter which I shall print today. And a very sensible, intelligent question it is.

Every normal girl, whether she be demure and old-fashioned or ultra-modern, hopes sooner or later—possibly, after she has had her fill of good times and attentions—to settle down with her man and found a home.

It is natural that men and women should mate. And from the time she leaves little-girl days behind, a girl begins to long and search for this helpmate, who shall share all her joys and responsibilities of his own.

As for men, even the most confirmed bachelor has hidden in his heart a deep-rooted desire for a home of his own.

Foolish, indeed, is the young man or girl who leaves out of the scheme of life, the determination to marry sensibly and happily before the days of youth are over.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes Rose,

"Do you think a girl can go after a husband in the same way she might go after success in other things—as, for instance, her job?

"I have been very successful in my work, although I am not especially noted for being brilliant. Now, at the age of 27, I have reached a high office position. The reason I have succeeded is not because I have been much interested in a career, but because I want the best of everything; so I determined to obtain a good job, paying a high salary.

"When I was growing up I was led to believe that the right man would come along, as the saying goes, at the right time, as a matter of course, and that we would marry and live happily ever after. As I am of rather a romantic nature, this idea always appealed to me.

"You are good and wise. Won't you please tell me what you think of a young woman of 27 should do if she wants to win her ideal man? ROSE."

First of all, please let me congratulate you, Rose, because you are honest with yourself. You know what you want and you set about in a practical, sensible way to obtain what you want. Too many young women merely drift, without analysing themselves and their hopes and wants, or asking themselves in what direction they are headed. Then when they fail they blame fate, another woman, a man—anyone and everyone except themselves, who alone are to blame.

To choose the best and try to realise the best is the secret of success. I do not necessarily mean by the best that which costs most in dollars and cents, but perfection physical, mental and spiritual, and in every phase of living.

You are wise to face your problem of romance and marriage with that same direct honesty which has served you so well in your business career.

This does not mean Rose, that I suggest your applying immediately at a matrimonial agency for a prospective husband. Nor do I advise you to propose marriage to the man you like best.

But in all your planning it is well to keep in the back of your head the fact that you hope for successful marriage and a home of your own. This subconscious thought will keep up to your best standards of charm and character. Each day may prove to be The Day in which you will meet or win The Man. So you will try to be at your best always.

Go where you are likely to meet men who are dependable in character, interesting, ambitious and congenial. Do not waste your time with the other kind. Encourage the friendship and friendly attentions of the type of men you respect and like even though you may not love them. Love may come later.

You cannot, of course, go after a husband in quite the outspoken way in which you might apply for a business position or promotion. A woman's role in love is responsive. The clever woman recognizes and takes advantage of this great truth. When you meet men who are worth while as friends, win their interest and hold it by your responsive sympathy, charm and womanly character.

Needless to say, you are not looking for a fascinating faithless Don Juan as friend, sweetheart, or husband, but for a man you can respect and like, you will win equally the approval of your heart and head.

Like attracts like. If you make yourself the best, the most charming and attractive woman in your circle of acquaintances and friends, is it not likely that you will attract and hold the interest and love of the dearest and best man? All success to you in your quest for romance!

"The tites are your twins; we still mirror the stars."—Jerema.

AN extremely active and busy day is the presage made from the lights in true aspect and the transit of Luna to Mars, the latter energizing initiative and aggression. Employment is also under benefic rule, encouraging promotion and preferment.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of promotion and preferment, with the energies stimulated to enterprise.

A child born on this day may be aggressive and enterprising and should have every opportunity for position and honors.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

Caring for the Body in Kidney Diseases.

THERE is almost universal ignorance as to the importance or otherwise of the items found in the report of a urinary test. But everybody seems to believe that presence of albumen and "casts" is a dangerous state of affairs. The discovery of these things throws the owner into a panic of fear.

DR COPELAND

For some years we have been urging upon the public the importance of regular physical examinations. There can be no doubt of their value. Too many of us are like the ostrich, hiding the head in the sand and shutting out the sight of danger. We have been unwilling to be examined "for fear some dreadful trouble might be discovered."

It is entirely unnecessary to point out the silliness and absurdity of this attitude of mind. To be lulled into a sense of security, is like shutting the door of the closet where a fire exists, and imagining that all is well.

If there are albumen and casts in the urine you should know it and be governed accordingly. Their presence need not mean death or shortened life.

A quarter of a century ago a famous doctor wrote a paper "On the Advantages of a Trace of Albumen and a Few Tube Casts in the Urine of Men Over Fifty Years of Age."

It seems absurd to think it could actually be beneficial to have these dreadful substances in the urine. But what Dr. Osler meant was that many a man has lived a careless, indifferent, or possibly a reckless life. The discovery of these urinary changes makes him fate seriously, as he never did before, the absolute necessity for a reform in his manner of living.

The victim of kidney disease must not overwork. He should be occupied of course, because the idle person suffers from his own inactivity. What I mean is that he should not permit himself to become over-fatigued habitually. To do so exhausts his energy and lowers his vitality.

In all probability, the blood pressure is high and sudden exertion, heavy lifting, or other violent physical effort is liable to do harm. It might cause a blood vessel to break.

But gentle exercises and light labor will be beneficial. Indeed, it is essential to the victim of kidney disease, as it is to the healthy person who would keep in good health.

We have three kinds of food—proteins, fats and carbohydrates. Starch and sugar are the carbohydrates.

In kidney disease the protein diet should be reduced. But let it not be believed that proteins are responsible for the kidney trouble. Lean meat is our chief protein and it used to be thought that the proteins are actually the cause of Bright's disease. We don't believe that now, but we do think it is wise to limit the protein intake. For a kidney patient such as we are considering, the temperate use of meat once a day is enough.

It is very important to get rid of any local infections. Bad teeth or tonsils, or chronic indigestion must be given careful attention.

Rash exposure to the weather, late hours and all manner of excesses must be avoided. But by reasonable care, the victim of kidney trouble may live out his expectancy.

IT IS always astonishing to a man to discover that a woman has so little sense of humor that she believes all he tells her.

When two girls fall out, it is nearly always for a good big reason—at least six feet tall.

A coat of rags may often hide a loyal, honest heart; but no coat of rouge ever hid an honest wrinkle.

After all, every man is half a child at heart, and would rather have you like him than adore him, amuse him than improve him, jolly him than idealize him, and play with him than reform him.

All that a woman seems to need, these days, in order to get away with murder, is a good figure, a good bank account, and a good lawyer.

Somehow, the fact that you know that a man would have made you miserable for life, is no consolation for not having married him.

So long as a man is in love with a woman, her presence fills the room like cut flowers; when he ceases to be in love with her, even the sound of her footstep in the next room fills him with apprehension, and affects him like ice dropped down the spine.

There are just two times in his life when a man fully values a woman's love; before he gets it—and after he has lost it.

Cannon Balls

There are five groups of cannon balls in today's picture.

One group contains more cannon balls than any other.

Do not try to count the groups, but look them over and compare them; then pick out the one which you believe contains the most balls. Take only 30 seconds for this "teaser."

Yesterday's Answer

The history dates were as follows:

1492, discovery of America; 1609, founding of Jamestown; 1775, Concord and Lexington and signing of the Declaration of Independence; 1812, war with Great Britain; 1848, conclusion of Mexican War; 1861; beginning of Civil War; 1898, Spanish War. 1917, outbreak of World War.

To name all 8 dates is exceptional; 7, very good; 6, good.

WARNS AGAINST ANNEXATION TRICKERY

Allegheny county's 123 independent municipalities face the possibility of being swept into Pittsburgh by forced annexation by any session of legislature, Attorney Robert P. Lewis, member of the executive committee of the Metropolitan District Commission, told members of the Ross Township Board of Trade at a meeting last night in the Perrysville public school.

Attorney Lewis recommended the proposed Metropolitan District constitutional amendment, which would preserve home rule for the municipalities as a means of blocking trick legislation to sweep the county's third-class cities, boroughs and townships into the city against their wills.

AFTER PERIOD OF TORTURE, MAN FINDS RELIEF FROM ITCHING

Skin now entirely healed

Charlestown (Boston), Mass., Dec. 18:—"Last June I had an itching irritation on my back, principally between the shoulders, and also on the back of my hands, extending to the shoulders. The skin was apparently clear of any disorder, but the itching was intense. After a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel there would appear two spots, about an inch apart, which bled from the effects of the rubbing. I used Bay Rum and other lotions before I tried your Resinol Ointment. At bedtime my back received a thorough washing with Resinol Soap and a very generous application of Ointment, after which I would rest quite comfortably until about two or three in the morning, when I received another application. A third upon arising would be enough to make me feel at ease during the day. Thanks to the above treatment, the trouble is now entirely healed." (Signed) John W. Matthews, 1 Crystal Place.

Why risk body odor

when this hygienic toilet soap keeps pores purified?

Keeps complexions healthy

A healthy skin is a clear, fresh glowing skin. And just as Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather purifies body pores, so does it purify face pores, keeping complexions soft, smooth and healthy looking.

Better still, it helps protect against disease—by removing unseen germs from hands.

Lifebuoy's clean, hygienic scent—which quickly evaporates after rinsing—tells you it gives greater safety. Yet Lifebuoy costs so little. It is orange-red, the color of its pure palm-fruit oils. Get it today.

THE LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON

Passion for Original Work Dominates Him

Wilson Finds the Law Unsuitable To Him and He to It and Turns Definitely to Study

Wilson's first venture as an earner was described yesterday in the Sun-Telegraph installment of "The Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson." He opened a law office, but clients not appearing he taught shorthand and earnestly studied the tariff. On this subject he wrote a brief and made an address before the United States Tariff Commission. At this time he first met Walter Hines Page.

Career as Lawyer Soon Over

By RAY STANNARD BAKER

IN OCTOBER, 1882, we have a glimpse of "a tall, dignified, young man with blond hair" appearing in court at Atlanta, Ga., before Judge George Hillyer, to take his examination for admission to the bar. The examinations in those days were conducted by a committee of four seasoned lawyers and had something of the interest of a gladiatorial contest. Many people were often present to watch the baiting of the would-be lawyer, and, there being too many lawyers anyway, court and bar were not sorry when an applicant failed. Wilson's examination lasted all of two hours and was the more severe because of the publicity which had attended the applicant's astonishing temerity in appearing before the Tariff Commission. His responses were, however, "not short of brilliant," and when the examiner finally pronounced a long and complicated catch question the judge interposed:

"Mr. Wilson needn't respond to that question. The court himself could not answer it."

A great many years later, when this young lawyer was swiftly becoming one of the foremost men in the country, he went to Atlanta to address the Southern Commercial Congress.

At a breakfast given in his honor he was introduced by Judge Hillyer. Ex-President Roosevelt had addressed a meeting on the previous day and President Taft was to speak that evening. Judge Hillyer, in presenting Mr. Wilson, said:

"Last night we had here a man who has been President of the United States. This evening we shall hear a man who is President of the United States. But we have with us this morning a man who is going to be President of the United States."

In his speech on that occasion Mr. Wilson started off by paying a tribute to Judge Hillyer, and telling how he had been examined for admission to the bar.

Wilson's certificate of admission to practice in the state courts of Georgia is dated October 19, 1882. In the following March, the 12th, as qualified for the federal courts—though he had not enough money on hand at the time to pay the $10 fee and the application bears the notation, "Owes $5."

One Lone Client!

If the legal business of his firm continued lean, Wilson was to have still another impressive experience. He had seen something of court practice, he had taken a part in a national congressional investigation. He was now to make an acquaintance with a post-bellum southern Legislature. Having time enough and to spare he sits in the gallery of the Georgia Senate, looking down upon the assembled legislators—country lawyers, merchants, farmers, politicians, all of them poor—many densely ignorant. Above all, untrained! As different as the poles from the British Parliament, wherein a class of men from leisured families, disciplined for leadership, ruled the state.

The very first thing he finds the legislators doing arouses in him the strongest antagonism. They have been asked to raise more money for the miserably supported schools of their state, they have been told by their state superintendent of education, Dr. Orr, that the taxpayers can easily bear the burden of added appropriations, but they vote down the proposal by a large majority and pass a resolution on the spot "that the Representatives and Senators of the state in Washington be requested to do all in their power to secure a grant from the Federal Treasury in aid of education."

To this ardent, gifted, high-spirited youth, with his noble ideals of public service, all these contacts with the starved and barren life of the post-bellum South were utterly disillusioning. To go through such a law practice to take part in such politics! Possibly if clients had come knocking at his door with interesting cases to engage his restless mind his history might have been different, but so far as the present biographer is able to discover, Wilson, the lawyer, never had a case of his own, although he was assigned in court upon one occasion to represent a Negro who had no lawyer. His principal client was his mother, who sent him a power of attorney for the control of her small property, which had been in the hands of his uncle, James Bones. But his effort to serve that one client, which involved a visit to his uncle at Rome, Ga., in April, 1883, was to result in one of the most important events of his entire life.

Wilson Finds Himself

By the turn of the year we find Wilson becoming much discouraged . . . "the potentially great firm of Renick & Wilson (is) doing very little but hoping very much. . . In the course of about one year we hope to be meeting expenses after some sort; but at present we are not doing so, not by a very large majority," he writes to R. Heaton Dabney in January, 1883.

He was acutely conscious of the burden he was upon his father and the uncomplaining sacrifices of his mother. His father, indeed, was be- [illegible] nothing was [illegible] lanta isn't making a cent," he tells a friend in Wilmington. Outside of a few inconsequential fees for drawing up bills of sale and other instruments and for attempting to collect "desperate claims" he earned no money at all from his practice.

Worse still, Wilson was finding the law more and more intolerable. He wrote to Robert Bridges in 1882:

"I fully sympathise with the Hen. in his impatience of the dreadful drudgery which attends the initiation into our profession. But a stout heart will pull us both through right bravely, I hope. I keep myself in good humor, besides, by indulging in my favorite recreation, composition. I allow myself my afternoons for writing—and for reading on my old and loved topics, history and political science; devouring Houghton, Mifflin & Co.'s American Statesmen series and Macmillan's English Citizen series—both altogether to my taste. Possibly, if I can find on the continent some specially kind and specially venturesome publisher what I write may some day see the light and masquerate in print. But I am no longer confident of finding such a publisher."

Envious of Dabney

While the youth thus waits for clients he is eating his heart out for the "advantages and delights of study" and grows pathetically envious of his friend Dabney, who has gone to Germany to work for his doctor's degree. The very "name of his courses" is music to his ears! Few there are, but they are of the elect of the earth, who know the hunger of the scholarly mind for food that will truly satisfy its appetite. He writes to Dabney in 1883:

"The receipt of your letter rejoiced my heart. You great, fat Dutchman, you! The idea of your weighing 183 pounds! How I would like to see you and your beer-wetted paunch! I should like to be with you for more reasons than one, indeed—not only to renew the pleasures of our old university good fellowship, but also to share your advantages and delights of study. History and political science! Why, they are of all studies my favorites; and to be allowed to fill all my time with them, instead of, as now, stealing only a chance opportunity or two for hasty perusal of those things which are most delightful to me, would be of all privileges the most valued by yours humbly. I have to be content with a very precarious allowance of such good things. . .

"However that may be, I am, at all events, very much interested in even the name of your courses and am impelled to beg that you will give me some particular account of them; that you will tell me just what line the German students pursue—especially in political science. To know what they think the best methods of study would be of much advantage to me. I should like, as far as possible, to go along with you in your work."

All that spring of 1883 he grows more and more hopeless. He longs for the beautiful things of the mind. He suffers acutely for the "lack of intellectual companionship." The practice of the law is not what he thought. Its "practice . . . for purposes of gain, is antagonistic to the best interests of the intellectual life." He turns again to the study of his own beloved subjects. He discovers to his relief that some of the very men of his admiration—Burke, Sir Henry Maine and Bagehot—trained as lawyers, but found the legal profession unsatisfying." And he makes the decision finally to abandon Atlanta and "followed the natural bent" of his mind by pursuing his studies at Johns Hopkins University.

Why He Abandoned Law

In a letter to Dabney, remarkable for the disclosure of the restless and aspiring soul of the man, he sets forth the reasons why he is abandoning the law, exhibits his interest in local state politics and engages his friend in a discussion of a definition of "the state."

"48 Marietta Street,
"Atlanta, Ga., May 11, 1883.

"My Dear Heath:

"The receipt of your letter was a delightful surprise. I say 'surprise' because it cannot but be a matter of grateful surprise that any one—even you—away off there in Europe, surrounded by everything that is attractive in the Old World, deep in the work of a great university, and looking forward to a Ph. D. in Berlin, should ever think of me, buried in humdrum life down here in slow, ignorant, uninteresting Georgia. I read this letter of yours with as much envy as I felt when I read the one which preceded it: for who can help envying a man who is taking, under the most favirable circumstances imaginable, the very course that one longs to take himself?' It is not human nature to do otherwise. I am, however (let me tell you with rejoicings), about to do what is the next best thing for a fellow who is confined to the limits of this continent; for I have about made up my mind to study, at Johns Hopkins University, the very subjects which you are now studying in Germany under the great masters with unpronounceable names. In doing this I am, beyond all reasonable doubt, following the natural bent of my mind. I can never be happy unless I am enabled to lead an intelligent life. . . .

"But hereabouts culture is very little esteemed; not, indeed, at all because it is a drug on the market, but because there is so little of it that its good qualities are not appreciated. . . . It goes, therefore, without the saying that, though I am . . . being made wise in worldly craft, I suffer very much in such a community for lack of intellectual companionship.

"But the greater matter is that the practice of the law, when conducted for purposes of gain, is antagonistic to the best interests of the intellectual life. One can easily exchange one community for another; he can even live above the deteriorating influences of the community in which his lot is cast; but he cannot so emancipate himself from the necessary conditions of his profession. The philosophical study of the law—which must be a pleasure to any thoughtful man—is a very different matter from its scheming and haggling practice.

"Burke spoke with his usual clear-sighted wisdom when he spoke of the law as 'one of the first and noblest of human sciences—a science which does more to quicken and invigorate the understanding than all the other kinds of learning put together; but it is not apt, except in persons very happily born, to open and liberalize the mind in exactly the same proportion.' . .

"Now, here it is that the whole secret of my new departure lies. You know my passion for original work, you know my love for composition, my keen desire to become a master of philosophical discourse, to become capable and apt in instructing as great a number of persons as possible. My plain necessity, then, is some profession which will afford me a moderate support, favorable conditions for stduy and considerable leisure; what better can I be, therefore, than a professor, a lecturer upon subjects whose study most delights me? Therefore it is that I have prayed to be made a fellow of Johns Hopkins; and therefore it is that I am determined, if I fail of that appointment (as I probably shall, since it is not won but given), to go next winter anyhow to Baltimore and bury myseuf for a season in the grand libraries of that beautiful city. . . ."

Wilson's first acquaintance with Ellen Axson, his future wife, and the beginning of his ardent courtship will be described in tomorrow's installment.

CALLES KILLS 3 MORE REBEL GENERALS

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Further executions are announced in the Calles government's stern campaign to stamp out the military revolt.

Following upon the news of the execution of Gen. Francisco Serrano, presidential candidate and 13 of his prominent followers, a statement issued from the presidential bureau tells of three more captures and summary punishment in widely separated regions.

In Pachuca, Hidalgo state, northeast of Mexico City, former Gen. Arturo Laso De La Vega attempted to incite troops to rebellion and was captured and executed.

In Zacatecas City, to the northwest of the capital, former Genls. Alfredo Rodriguez and Norberto A. Olivera were given the extreme penalty on similar charges.

It was alleged they acted on orders from Gen. Arnulfo Gomez, who with Gen. Serrano was named by the government as instigator of a nationwide revolutionary movement.

Gen. Alvarez, chief of President Calles' staff, claims that only two rebel military groups remain in arms in the entire country, that they are small in number and that with 5,000 federal soldiers pursuing them, their early surrender is expected.

Both groups are in Vera Cruz state. One is of perhaps 800 men, led by Gen. Gomez. The other is commanded by Gen. Hector Almada, chief of the Mexico City garrison, who led the troops which left the capital Sunday night to join the revolutionary movement.

Gen. Almada is said to have left only part of two battalions out of the 800 men who marched from Mexico City with him. The others, two regiments and the remainder of the two battalions, are declared to have surrendered to the Federals.

Announcement of the surrender was made late last night by Gen. Alvarez. Earlier in the day he announced the capture of one major and several soldiers of Almada's force near Perote, Vera Cruz.

The Almada group is pursued by 3,000 men under Gen. Gonzalo Escobar, while Gen. Jesus Aguirre with 2,000 is seeking Gomez and his followers.

Gen. Alvarez exhibited to the newspapermen telegrams from the governors and military commandants in the remainder of the republic reporting the troops loyal and conditions tranquil.

He also called attention to the fact that, out of the federal army of 70,000, only 1,500, or at most 2,000, proved disloyal when the movement started.

OCEAN GIVES UP NOTE SIGNED 'MISS DORAN'

By Universal Service

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 5.—The mighty Pacific has yielded what purported to be the last message sent by Miss Mildred Doran, flying school teacher, lost in the Dole race to Hawaii.

A note ostensibly written by the brave girl while the brilliant Buhl biplane was on its way over the sea was discovered in a tightly-corked bottle floating in San Francisco Bay, off Point Fleming, by a Berkeley boy, Karl Oelrich.

The letter was turned over to the Berkeley police. While Miss Doran was a college graduate, the note is marked with mistakes in spelling and grammar.

The note, printed with lead pencil on a scrap of paper torn from a note book follows:

"(Tuesday, Aug. 16, 1927)—On 2nd trip not feeling so good; engine still missing, but the boys say it will get better after it runs for a while, but I fear the worst as Auggie Pedlar don't look any too pleased when I had a look at him last.

Sally Meets Beau's "Girl", Who Hears About Mabel And Beau's Child

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

SALLY JEROME, pretty and clever, is the mainstay of her family in the absence of her father, who does not live with her mother. MRS. JEROME enjoys poor health, so Sally does the housework mornings and office work in the afternoons. BEAU and MILLIE, her brother and sister, give almost nothing toward the upkeep of the house. Occasionally Mr. Jerome sends some money. The real load falls upon Sally's shoulders. In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, who is in love with Sally. But the only man who interests her is JOHN NYE, whose office is across the hall from Mr. Peevey's office, where Sally works. Nye is infatuated with Millie, who is his secretary. Millie says that she likes him and his money, but she really prefers a bond salesman named DAVIDSON. When Mr. Peevey retires, Sally goes into the wayside inn business with her AUNT EMILY JEROME. The inn does not prosper, and finally Aunt Em hires a jazz band, and Sally and Ted put on an exhibition dance, which draws the crowds. The whole family comes to live at the inn, too lazy to do their own housework without Sally. Then Mrs. Jerome goes out of town to her sick husband and sends to Sally for whatever money she wants. To MABEL, Beau's wife, a baby boy is born, and Beau starts running around with another woman. Mabel makes up her mind to go back to work until she has enough money to start housekeeping. While she is wondering where to look for a job Millie comes home with the news that she has quit her job, and adds that she'd like to "smack John Nye's face for him." She hints that he has tried to make love to her. Mabel laughs at this in private and goes down town to [illegible] Millie's old job. The next day a wire comes from Mrs. Jerome asking for money and announcing she is coming home with her husband. Then Beau's "girl" calls up and says she's coming to see him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

SALLY could have laughed at her anxiety to get away and her truly funny expression of fear, if she had not felt like crying, too. It seemed such a dreadful thing for Beau to do—to pick up a girl of this type for an evening's wild escapade when he had a tiny son upstairs and a wife who was willing to work for him. Sally had gained a lot of respect for the jazzy, brassy little Mabel during the past day and a half.

She turned the key in the door and the girl, whose name she did not even know, swung through the opening and down the long shadowy hall to the front porch.

Just as she reached it and started briskly down the front steps, a small red car flashed through the gateposts and curved around the driveway. It stopped at the bottom of the steps before Beau even saw the girl who knew him as "Bud."

But the girl saw him.

Her eyes went from him to the woman who sat beside him—Mabel! By some unlucky chance Beau had picked Mabel up on his way home from down town. Sally, watching the little scene from the screen door, groaned as she saw the smile of malice that slanted across the unknown girl's face.

"You're a swell kind of a bozo, aren't you?" she heard her call in that coarse nasal voice. "To take a decent girl out when all the time you got a mama of your own at home. You're some baboon, all right. Don't do me no favors next time, Bud, by asking me out. Stay at home and walk the floor with the kid. That's plenty of speed for you!"

If her slang was hard to understand, her attitude towards Beau was very plain. And Mabel's little face was a study as she watched her go swinging down the driveway, rounded hips swaying, anklets flashing under thin stockings, bracelets tinkling cheerfully as she walked. She vanished through the tall gateposts like some over-dressed movie vamp in a bathing beauty film.

"So that's the kind of girl you like, Beau!" Mabel said to her husband with unexpected quietness when she was out of sight. "So that's what you pick up with when Mabel gives you your head. Well, let me tell you, something, Beau. We're leaving this house this week and you're going into a house of your own where you won't have so much loose money to throw away on daughters of Jazz!"

Sally could have given Mabel three cheers as she listened to her. Really, hard luck was making quite a woman of little Mabsy, she said to herself that night as she got into her blue dress and strapped on her blue and silver dancing slippers. Hard luck always brings out the best—or the worst—in any woman. It all depends on the kind of woman she happens to be.

That night Mabel came to her when she was undressing for bed. "Will you do me the greatest favor?" she asked. "I want to go house hunting—or flat hunting, I should say—tomorrow. And I've just started on this new job, and I want to hold it for a while. Will you take my place in Mr. Nye's office while I look up a flat?"

Sally's heart seemed to turn a complete somersault in her breast. . . . To go back to the familiar office in the Nye-Naylor Building! To take orders once again from the deep, low voice of John Nye! To see his dark, handsome head bent over his desk, and his tanned hands nervously tapping the plate glass cover or the telephone! . . . The mere thought of these things made her breast come jerkily and a slow, painful flush stir in her cheeks.

"No," she said. "I'm sorry, Mabsy." She remembered how Millie had said he had laughed at her, and at the small kindnesses she had done for him.

She remembered, too, that embarrassing moment when he had come upon her in Ted Sloan's arms under the willow tree and the currant bushes in Aunt Em's dark garden not so long ago.

"Anything else, I'd do for you," she declared, "but not that."

Mabel's troubled face grew still more troubled. "I've got to find a flat," she explained again. "And the sooner I do find it the better for me, I think. I'm not going to fuss with Beau about running out with this girl—but I am going to get him to the place where he won't have any money for anyone but me and the baby. Wild women won't run around with a man who doesn't have a lot of money to spend. And I'm going to see that Beau doesn't have ANY!" Her face was firm with determination as she marched off to bed.

The next morning when Mabel went down stairs for the baby's bottle she found Sally getting breakfast in a bungalow apron that covered her old office suit of black serge.

Sally had changed her mind.

"I thought I'd go down and take care of your work, Mabsy," she said, without looking up from the eggs she was cracking for an omelet. "After all, the most important thing for us right now is to get Beau back on the straight and narrow. And even if I don't like John Nye, I don't mind spending a day in an office, while you look up a place to live."

"Even if I don't like John Nye." It gave her the strangest feeling to say that. . . . She knew, as she said it, that she loved him. She might hate him, in a way, because he had treated her more or less shabbily, but she couldn't get over her feeling of thrill whenever she thought about him. . . . What was it the silly, popular song said:

"But when I hate you
It's 'cause I love you—"

It was silly, but it was true.

"Why don't you like John Nye?" Mabel's voice was an echo of her thoughts.

"Why don't I?" asked Sally, slipping out of the apron and popping the omelet into the oven.

"Now, Mabsy, you take that out in 20 minutes," she said. "Beau will be down for breakfast by then, and you might carry some up to Millie. . . . Why, I don't like him because—because—"

"You don't like him because Millie's trying to make you think that he got smart with her!" chirped Mabel, nodding her head wisely. "But don't let her come any of that stuff on you! I heard all about what really happened between her and John Nye from Miss Kress. I told you I'd find out, and I did!"

CHAPTER LIV.

"WHAT really happened," said Mabel, with a triumphant gleam in her eyes, "was this: Davy Davidson came up to see Millie about 10 o'clock on the morning she left Mr. Nye's office. Mr. Nye was late that morning, and so Millie took Davy into his private office. They were in there when Mr. Nye came in."

Mabel, who had always spoken of John Nye as "Millie's sheik" or "Millie's Johnny," had been calling him "Mr. Nye" in most respectful tones for two days now.

"Miss Kress says that he walked straight into his private office," she went on, and Sally could see that she enjoyed knowing and telling all this gossip about Millie. "He left the door open, and there sat Millie on Davy's lap, with her arms around his neck and crying all over him—"

"Crying?" echoed Sally, her violet-blue eyes wide open and filled with curiosity. "What do you suppose she was crying about?"

Mabel shrugged her small shoulders. "How should I know what she was crying about?" she wanted to know in her impudent, sharp way. "I have plenty of reasons for my own tears without worrying about other people and their troubles. But Miss Kress says she's just crazy about Davidson. Calls him up two or three times a day and tries to make dates with him."

She paused to draw a breath and rushed on with what she had to say.

"Well, as soon as Davidson saw Mr. Nye he jumped up and beat it right out of the office, and left Millie there alone to face the music. Miss Kress saw the whole thing because the office door stood wide open, and she could look in without even moving her head.

"As soon as Davidson was gone Millie began to cry harder than ever and told Mr. Nye that Davidson had simply been sympathizing with her—and that he was nothing more than her good friend, and all that sort of guff.

"But she couldn't pull any wool over his eyes, evidently, because he told her he couldn't have things like that happening in his office, and asked Miss Kress to write her a check for two weeks' salary. And then he fired Miss Millie, if you please!"

"Fired her?" Sally could scarcely believe her ears. "You mean that John Nye discharged Millie?" It was unbelievable. Why, John Nye was in love with Millie! She knew that.

Mabel nodded. "He certinly did. And Miss Kress says that she wasn't the least bit surprised. He had been furious with Millie for weeks because she never was down at the office on time, and she would go out to lunch and stay for two hours, and she stayed home at least one day every week."

Sally frowned perplexedly. All this was quite beyond her. She couldn't figure it out to save her life. Millie had said only the week before that John Nye was wildly in love with her, and that the reason he stayed away from The House by the Side of the Road was because he was jealous of Davy Davidson.

"Perhaps he's jealous of Davidson and angry with Millie for letting him make love to her," she said slowly. "That must be it."

But Mabel shook her head vigorously. "No, that's where you're all wrong!" she declared with her air of knowing just what she was talking about. "Miss Kress says that Millie was always making eyes at Mr. Nye and trying to make him jealous at the same time. She'd tell him she had been out to lunch with Davidson and he'd tell her it didn't make any difference to him whom she lunched with, but that she couldn't stay out for more than her regular hour. Miss Kress says that Mr. Nye used to be awfully keen on Millie, but that he's all over it now."

Madge Plans to Put a Crimp in the Imperious Miss Lincoln

JIM'S translation of the words uttered by the two uncouth foreigners with the savage dog almost upset my gravity. "Stay down all summer for their health and the fishing," I repeated to myself, adding that two more perfect specimens of physical prowess I never had seen, despite the repellence which their long uncut hair, bushy beards and unkempt appearance had aroused in me.

Whatever their purpose in coming to the east end of Long Island, health was not one of their reasons. Fishing was more plausible, for there is excellent piscatorial sport to be found in the bays and coves at the east end of the island. But there came a sudden psychic little conviction into my mind that neither of the reasons they had given explained the real purpose of their residence so near us.

As I furtively scrutinised their powerfully built frames and unprepossessing faces, I anathematized, and not for the first time, the short-sighted penuriousness of "old-man Grimsey," as Jim disrespectfully had called him, whose land adjoined ours at the rear and who each summer rented a shack upon it to anyone who would pay for it. He would not repair it, and it was in such tumble-down condition that no self-respecting persons would occupy it. Each season we had been annoyed more or less by his nondescript tenants, but this was the first time that I had felt real uneasiness at the proximity of any of them.

My experience in aiding Lillian in her secret service work during the World War and afterward, had taught me that people who try to disguise their knowledge, and to appear other than what they really are, will bear watching. I hastily marshaled in my mind the trifles I had against these men.

Both pretended to know only a few words of English, yet one of them—I guessed the taller man—had shouted to Jerry in perfect unaccented English.

The taller man had seen that I had instructed Katie to come into the yard, and had deducted that she could understand Transylvania, and that I brought her there to listen to them.

This was a far-fetched assumption, I knew, yet I could not forget the quick look he had flung me when Katie came running out, nor had it escaped my observation that upon his low-toned warning—I could call it nothing else—the two men had changed their conversation into the French tongue.

But I knew that I must give them no more reason for thinking I doubted the sincerity of their excuses, so with a smile I bowed to them, and instructing Jim to caution them about muzzling the dog, I led the irate Mrs. Ticer back to the house, bidding Katie follow me when she had finished picking roses.

My worthy neighbor was still angry, voicing threats of what she would have "Sam," her husband, do to the strangers if they ever let the dog run loose again. I had hard work to restrain my risibles as she talked, for I knew "Sam" possessed much less courage than either his wife or his son, and I hastened to change the trend of her thoughts as soon as I could. I was anxious to have her get away, for I was tremendously eager to question Katie concerning her impressions of the uncouth strangers.

"You were speaking about getting young Mr. Veritzen's lunch," I said, "when we were interrupted by that dog jumping at Jerry. Now, that will be very easily adjusted. Of course, it is preposterous for him to go up to the Lincoln house even if Miss Lincoln is unconventionel enough to plan it, for he never even has seen them. But he is an old friend of ours, especially of Mr. Graham's, and I know we can persuade him to come here. I will talk to him about it this afternoon."

Mrs. Ticer laughed amusedly.

"I'd like you to be around to see Miss Lincoln's face when I tell her," she said. "She's used to her own way, that girl."

FOR THE LOVELORN

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a young girl, 16 years old and a senior in high school. Now, Miss Gale, during the summer I was brought in contact with a wonderful young fellow four years my senior. He is very good looking and he is very well mannered. Through our numerous acquaintances I have grown to like him very much and in return he has shown that he cares a lot for me. Now Miss Gale, here is my trouble. At school there is another young fellow who is only one year my senior. I love this boy at school very much, yet at the same time I long for the other one. Miss Gale, I said I love the first one (the first one I knew, the second one mentioned) and I do, because, when I think of ever having to give him up I get a feeling down in my heart that I never want to part with him. So Miss Gale, I really believe that with the other it is really infatuation. Don't you? Miss Gale, these are not my only friends as I have many of both sexes. What would you advise me to do? Miss Gale, I am not of the fast type nor of the slow, and being of this type I gain the highest respect of all my male acquaintances. I hope that some of your fair writers take notice to this, especially those who think that being fast is the only way to become popular. Far from it. I know too well what fellows think of the fast girls they know, even though they respected them while they were together, because I am around them too much after school.

SOUGHT AFTER.

You are too young to be in love at all, my dear, so just be content with friendship with both boys. I am glad you have such high standards.

A Slow Girl

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a girl of 18, and can't have a boy friend because I don't pet, and am ever so lonely. I was going with a boy, who said I was too slow. I am always merry when I'm with a boy, but I don't pet. He said the girls now a days can't expect to have a good time with a boy unless they are fast and willing to pay the price for their good times. Are all boys like that? I never saw one yet that wasn't. If there was one that isn't fast I'd like to see that one. But I don't believe there is.

A SLOW GIRL.

Of course there are boys who do not approve of petting, my dear. You have been very unfortunate in your friendships if you have never met one. Stick to your convictions and you will never be sorry.

"De Europe"

DEAR MISS GALE:

I think your advice to be just wonderful. When I'm at home I read your advice and the troubles of others. At present, I am in Europe, but I am returning to America and I do hope to see this letter in print. I have come to ask you for some advice. Here's the question—If a girl goes to a party with a young man and meets another there appealing to her—should she stick to the first—or should she try to attract the second? 2—Which owes the greater duty—a parent to a child—or a child to a parent? Kindly give me some advice.

DE EUROPE.

1—She should not insult her escort by accepting the attentions of another man at the party. 2—In my opinion, the duty of parent to child or of child to parent is about equal.

As an astringent

So many women have proved the value of Listerine as an astringent that we are glad to pass the good word along.

The cost of Listerine compared to most astringents is very low, yet in effectiveness you would go a long way before finding its equal, especially for oily skins. Gently it contracts open pores, tightens sagging muscles, and leaves the face with a delightful sense of coolness.

If for no other reason than its stimulating effect upon the skin, you will be delighted with Listerine. And then remember how much it saves you!

Perhaps you'd be interested in receiving our handy little free book of etiquette. Just write for it to the Lambert Pharmacal Company, Dept. L-7, 2101 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

'HIKING' GIRLS STRANDED AS RIDE ENDS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 5.—A 700-mile lift on their hike from St. Louis to New York left Frances Leonard, 20, and her half-sister, Kathleen, 18, stranded in Uniontown. Police are searching for the driver of the car and the girls are being cared for in the local police station.

The girls started their 1,000-mile hike from St. Louis in conventional attire. Silk stockings and patent leather pumps were supposed to negotiate the rough roads. Their shoes were saved, for just outside St. Louis they obtained a lift from an east-bound tourist.

AUTOIST VANISHES

For 700 miles the girls enjoyed the hospitality of the autoist, and when they arrived here had expected that he would continue the journey to New York. For some reason he disappeared. Now the police are trying to locate the car, which, according to word reaching here, was stolen in Oklahoma City, Okla.

When the girls were let out of the auto they had no money and no change of raiment. They had resided in St. Louis six years and have wired there for money, but there have been no replies to their telegrams.

Kathleen told police that their driver can easily be identified, as she inflicted a long scratch on his cheek in a battle in the auto.

Big Things in Life Done in Advanced Years

By Universal Service

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—The average age of a man who does great things is not about 60 or 70 years, according to Dr. W. A. Newman Dorland, He points out that the average age of men doing great things in the past was about 50.

"We know," he says, "that the practice of corporations of retiring a man when he reaches 60 is a waste of brains.

"There is no reason why a man who shows initiative up to the age of 60 should quit showing it at that age.

"The man of 60 can succeed as well as the man of 30 if he keeps his health, his optimism and his interest.

"Roughly, 85 per cent of the big things done in the world today are done by men well past 50.

"J. P. Morgan, at the age of 70 in 1907, raised $40,000,000 in 40 hours and stopped the panic. The four great generals in the Russo-Japanese War were all past 60. In the World War all the great commanders, on both sides, were 60 or near it. President Paul Von Hindenberg, of Germany, is still doing great things and he is past 80."

Woman More Like Ape Than Man, Says Savant

LONDON, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Woman resembles the ape more than does man, it seems to Dr. Arthur Thomson, eminent British anatomist, professor in that science at Oxford University since 1893.

In making his assertion before the Royal Academy last night, Dr. Thomson said the basis for his statement was that woman's legs are usually shorter, and her arms longer, than man's.

It is only conceit which makes mankind believe it is not descended from the ape, he continued. Although generations have brought great changes in anatomy, the similarities are too great to be ignored. Furthermore, he contended, a baby, until it can walk, "resembles the ape in nearly every respect."

Another slam at the fair sex was taken by Prof. C. W. Valentine of Birmingham who, in addressing the British Science Association recently, asserted that women are not good judges of human nature, having a wonderful power of self-deception.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The government's anticipated program for future flood control along the Mississippi will be kept separate from the general program for improving inland waterways throughout the country, it was announced at the White House.

Union Pressmen Honor Mr. W. R. Hearst

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 5.—Chosen to succeed the late Lord Northcliffe as an honorary member of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union, William Randolph Hearst yesterday was presented with the document that formally certified his enrollment.

Heading the delegation that welcomed Mr. Hearst as a brother pressman, was Maj. George Berry, president of the organization. The delegates included high officials of the American Federation of Labor, commissioners of industry from several states and other distinguished labor leaders.

Honorary membership in the union is granted by the pressmen only to a small number of publishers who have won outstanding distinction.

"Your election as an honorary member actually took place very shortly after the death of Lord Northcliffe," Maj. Berry told Mr. Hearst.

"That you are receiving the certificate only today is merely because this is the first time that you and the officials of the union have been eyen in the same part of the country.

"The union is proud to number you among its members as a man whose achievements have been notable along many lines and whose recognition of the dignity of labor has always been sincere and spontaneous.

"You are now entitled to all the privileges and rights of a full-fledged member, including, if you choose, the duty of actually printing your own newspapers."

Greeted as "brother" by the delegates, Mr. Hearst declared that he would value his honorary membership most highly.

"I am deeply gratified by this honor," he said. "I know of no group of men with whom I would rather be associated, even in an honorary capacity, and I am proud to know that you thought me worthy of being Lord Northcliffe's successor."

The delegates who participated in the presentation were: Maj. George Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union; Peter J. Brady, president of the Federal Bank, New York City; William E. Edwards, commissioner of industry, New York state; William Young, commissioner of industry, Colorado; Clayton Pence, commissioner of industry, Illinois; John Horn, commissioner of public works, Los Angeles; Martin Ryan, vice president American Federation of Labor and president of the United Carmen; Senator Daniel Murphy of California; John Sullivan, president of the New York Federation of Labor; Walter Barrett, secretary, International Allied Printing Trades Association; Stephen Kelly, commissioner of records, New York; Fred Phister, president of the Newspaper Printing Pressmen's Union, Los Angeles; W. O. Vandewater, secretary; Danton Doggett, civil service commissioner, Fresno; Cal Doggett, international representative.

40,000 EAGER FANS THRONG FORBES FIELD

by JAMES J. LONG

WHY does a meeting of a couple of baseball clubs in a world series excite a populace almost to the point of frenzy, bring business to a standstill during certain hours of the day, turn a big city topsy-turvy, and in general bring about a state of chaos and wild uproar not approached on the occasion of any other event during the year?

After all, it might be argued, it means only seven ball games or less, ball games such as the public is accustomed to seeing 77 times a year in each major league city.

YET the fan who pays only from 50 cents to $1.75 per game during the regular season, and often complains that he is being overcharged at that, will hustle day and night and try countless schemes to get a box for three world series games at the rate of $155.40 or a strip of single tickets for $16.50.

If he fails to get the tickets through the regular channels he becomes all the more eager to see the series and hunts up a speculator, to whom he gladly pays $40 or even $50 for a strip of tickets—one seat at three games.

Others will stand in line for hours, or even all night, to purchase general admission tickets and be among the early ones to be admitted to the park and get seats in the open and unreserved bleachers.

IT is the old lure of color and excitement with something big to be fought for by the teams. You will find the same conditions at a big ring fight for the heavyweight championship. The game or the fight may be disappointing in the extreme as a contest or a spectacle, but the fans want to be there anyhow just because of the atmosphere.

It is an atmosphere not found anywhere else, the thrill of something big being at stake, the spectacle of the mighty Babe Ruth going to bat, the threat of a defeat for the home team, and then the most joyous excitement of all if the home club possibly comes from behind at the finish and pulls the game out of the fire. The battling players, the cheering crowds that run as high as 60,000 or more if the park has the capacity, the blare of the bands, critical moments at which a game or the series itself may be won or lost, all go to make an atmosphere that the average American is unable to resist.

PROBABLY the huge turnouts and the wild scenes that mark the big games may be due partly to something besides natural al-

Babe Given Big Ovation

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Tingling to their finger tips with excitement, 40,000 or more rabid baseball fans poured into the towering steel stands at Forbes Field this afternoon to witness the opening game of the annual world series drama. And drama it should be, what with such powerful ball clubs as the New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates arrayed against each other and determined to battle to the last putout.

Never before in a world series has there been a greater all-star cast than that which took the field today. There was the illustrious Babe Ruth, the peerless home run slugger; Lou Gehrig, almost as great an attraction; the incomparable Waner brothers, Paul and Lloyd; the spectacular Pie Traynor—and a scintillating array of lesser lights. On the sidelines there was comedy, Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, the clowns of baseball, doing their stuff; on the bench there was tragedy—Kiki Cuyler, the hero of the last Pittsburgh world series of 1925—sitting in the dugout with the green stock because he had incurred the displeasure of his manager earlier in the season.

Not only all this, but on Forbes Field today were lined up the two heaviest hitting baseball clubs of the present era—real fence busters, any one of whom may write his name indelibly on the imperishable records of baseball.

At 12:10 the Yanks, led by Babe Ruth, came rushing on the field. There was a tremendous uproar, intermingled with cries of "Oh, you Babe!" The Bambino looked very business-like and got busy tossing a few to Earl Combs. However, the photographers, a score or more in number, immediately surrounded the home run king and for 10 minutes he was kept busy posing from every conceivable angle.

The New Pork players wore their traveling uniforms of gray, with the word "Yankees" across their chests. They wore blue caps and black and gray stockings. While the mob of photographers were taking "shots" of Ruth and Gehrig, many of the Yankees sat in a group along the third-base line and watched with keen interest the practice of the pirates. Some of the New York players never had seen any of their National League opponents in action.

At 1 o'clock the Pirates took the field for batting practice. The attention of the fans was distracted from the practice when Nick Altrock and Al Schacht re-enacted the Tunney-Dempsey fight in a 24-foot ring put up just back of home plate.

Altrock was announced to the crowd as "Tunney." He was given thunderous applause which he acknowledged with upraised gloves. Schacht was "Dempsey." They fougth the seventh round all over again, Altrock drew a roar from the throng when he sank groggily to the floor and took a "long count" in slow motion picture style. The ring was then cleared away and the fans turned their attention to the ball players.

Hoyt began warming up for New York, Kremer for Pittsburgh.

The umpires came on the field at 1:25. Traynor, captain of the Pirates, and Charlie O'Leary, coach of the Yankees, went into consultation with them at the plate and presented the line-ups of their respective teams.

The high mogul of baseball has a stern look as he waits for the important cry of "Play ball!" in the world series beginning today at Forbes Field. And, oh, yes, he has no tickets left aside from his own.

GIVE ALL FANS CHANCE TO SEE ONE GAME

By HARRY KECK,
Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

NOW, while Commissioner Landis and all the other high moguls of baseball are in town, should be as good a time as any other to put forward a suggestion for a change in the method of selling tickets for world series battles.

We have in mind the rights of the well-known common pee-pul when we heed their cry for justice, and plenty of it, in the distribution of cardboards.

On all sides complaints are going up from fans who sent in their applications for seats the day the club announced it would receive them and got back their checks a few days ago with the information that the seats were entirely sold out. Others who sent in their requests later report having had them filled.

Those who received tickets, under the regulations covering the sale, are set for the entire series.

Pirates Are Set For Series Duel

By Vic Aldridge

"The Hoosier Schoolmaster."

FORBES FIELD was all astir on the eve of the big battle, the customary phalanx of photographers were on hand to obtain various poses of the Pirate squad. After this rather irksome task was completed the club indulged in an hour of batting practice to loosen up the muscles and sharpen the eyes in preparation to satisfactorily greet the Yank hurler in the opening game.

A two days' layoff seemed to have conserved a lot of energy within the boys as they hit the ball savagely to all fields. Glen Wright would have been awarded the prize for long-distance hitting, as he lined a fast one over the left field fence into the temporary bleachers.

The pitchers loosened up their arms and chased elusive fly balls fungoed out by Bill Hinchman and Chick Fraser to strengthen the legs and stimulate respiration. The Pirates then retired to the showers and the Yanks took the field for a period of hitting practice. This afforded me the opportunity of seeing Ruth and Gehrig in action for the first time. They sure are big, massive fellows and alongside the Waner brothers, in stature, would look like David and Goliath.

It was a treat to see them drive ball after ball into the upper tier of the right field grandstand. Of course we prefer to have them hit that way

Evenly Matched, Onslow Says of Bucs, Yanks

By Associated Press.

Jack Onslow, coach for the Pirates last season, who now holds the same position with the Washington Senators, qualifies as an expert on both clubs in the world series.

An even series Jack called it as it started. "The Pirates have the speed and some great pitchers," said Jack, "but the Yankees are not so slow as some people think and a lot of the boys are dead wrong on one thing. The Yanks cannot be curve-balled to death. They will hit curve balls—plenty of them."

The big coach, who was a clever catcher in his day, looked from one outfit to the other and repeated, "It's even." The Washington coach has great faith in his former teammate, Ray Kremer.

Series Bets Here Are Few

By JESS CARVER.

"Who do you like?"

That's the question that had Pittsburgh by the ear today. It is the only lucid remark that you could get out of anyone, unless you asked them if they had any tickets, and then the remark you got back was ninety-nine parts sulphur and blue smoke and one part the king's English.

Pittsburgh, baseball mad, frenzied, burst forth into the ravings of the possessed when Babe Ruth stepped to the plate for the first time this afternoon in the first game of the world series, is not laying its hard earned cash on the line to any great extent. Betting on the series is very light, so light in fact that the odds are being forced upward.

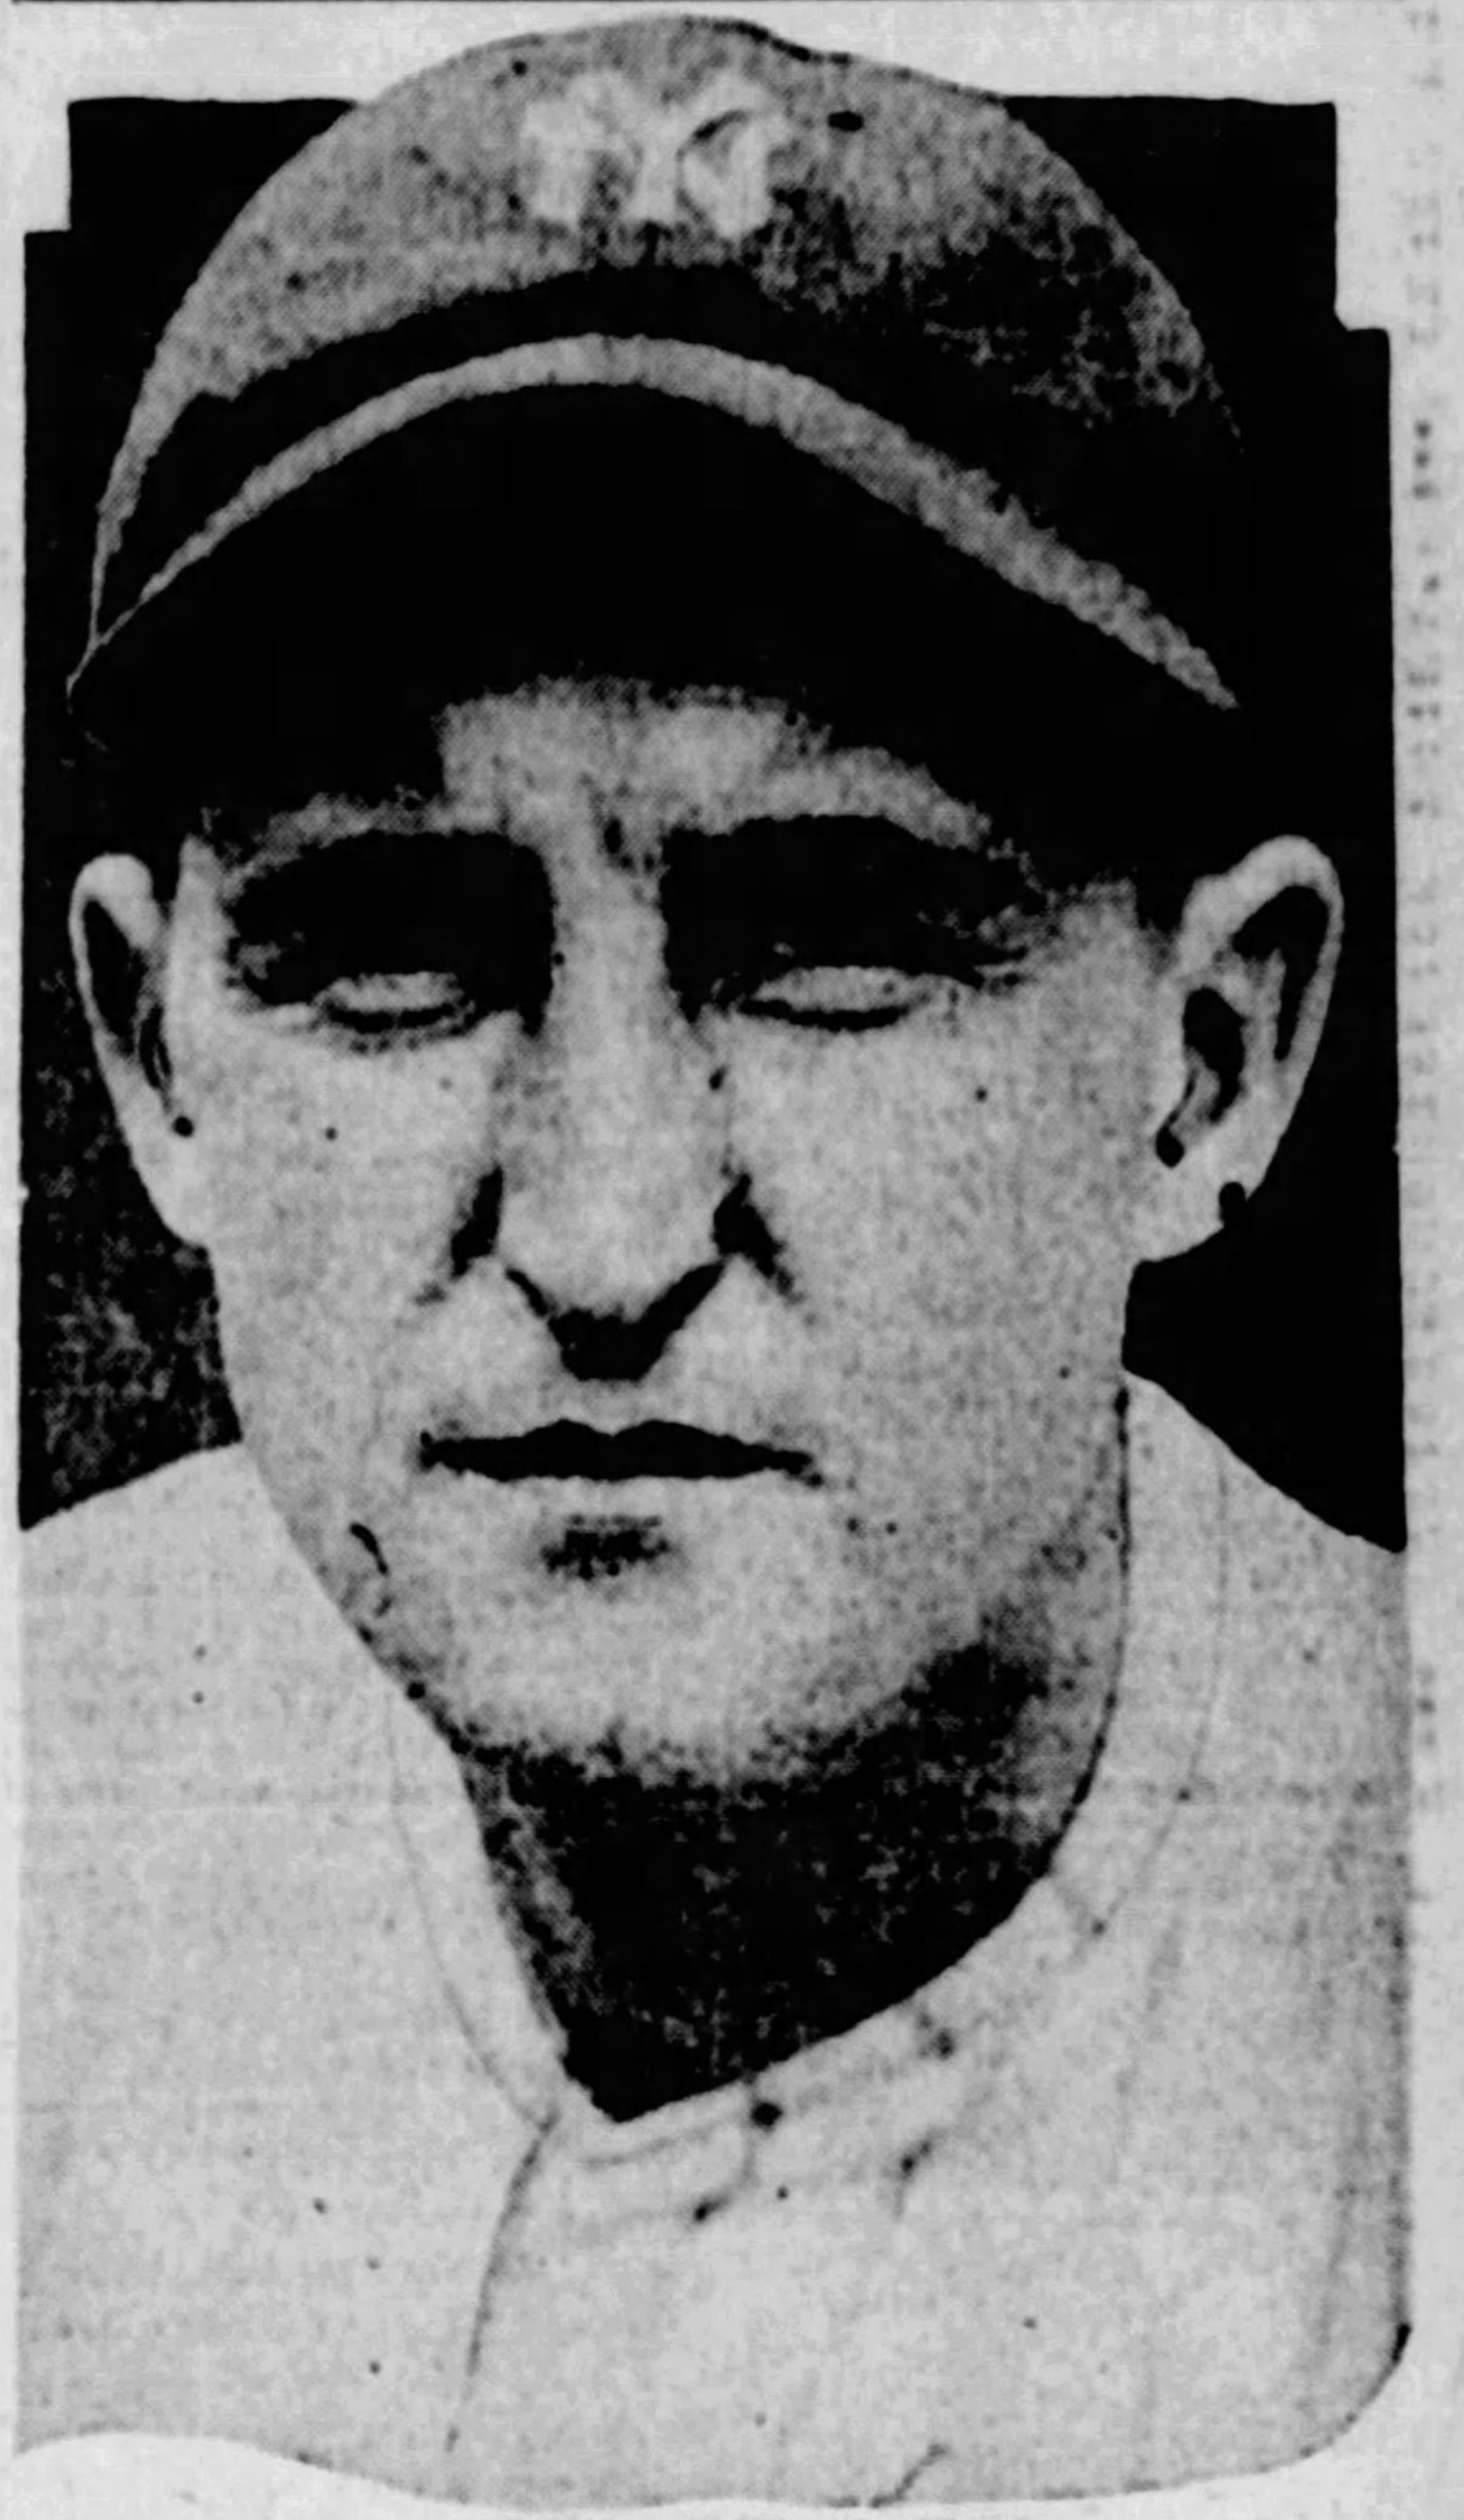
HONUS SHOWS BABE HOW

BABE RUTH HONUS WAGNER

Honus Wagner, former Pirate star, meandered out to Forbes Field yesterday to watch the Yankees and Pirates work out, and while there he talked on batting with the King of Swat himself, George Herman Ruth. Can't you just seem to hear Honus say in the above picture: "Now, then, here's the way we did it back in my day!" Behind the pair in the picture are (left to right) First Baseman Jacques Fournier of the Boston Braves, Wade Killefer, manager of the San Francisco Seals, and Dan Howley, manager of the St. Louis Browns.

YANK ACE CRIPPLED



HERB PENNOCK

The Yankees' world series victory hopes received a severe setback yesterday afternoon when Herb Pennock, southpaw slab star, suffered a ruptured blood vessel in his left leg. Herb sustained his injury while pitching to his mates in batting practice. A line drive from the bat of Cedric Durst, substitute outfielder, struck him about an inch above the knee. Pennock will not be able to start the second game, tomorrow, as planned, and it is possible that he may be lost to the Yanks for the series.

World Series Crowd a "Pro" Gathering

By JACK LAIT,
International News Service Correspondent.

They're all here—the hard-boiled scribblers, the sure-thing sharpshooters, the gyps, the dips, the sports and the mixers.

Strange gatherings these world series mobs are, and I've watched them since before the bald spot showed on the back of my cogitator and before four-eyed pitchers made the big league. Not aristocratic. Colorful, bizarre, but not refined. Not like a championship fight crowd, a derby gang or an Army-Navy football roundup. Anyway, that goes for those who travel out of town to take in the high peak annual American sports classic.

There is gaiety about a Tunney-Dempsey shindy. It concentrates to any center the financial lights, the literary stars, society, stage faves, politicians, men and ladies of luxury and leisure. Football leans heavily on our best people, bringing forth the most sedate as well as the most dashing. Racing spectacles produce the griddiest, the most effervescent set of all—debs, bloods, the flower of the nation.

But, with all the intensified appeal of our own indigenous game at its most fascinating climax, those who crave it sufficiently to go long distances after it in no way make up a group resembling the conclaves at those other functions.

Football is just as technical and has to be understood to be enjoyed. But it has its amateur tang, its partisan associations. Racing is strictly commercial, but it is the sport of kings, and this is a democracy that still worships kings—on Derby Day, anyway. There is a barbaric dignity to important pugilistic encounters which makes anyone who is someone feel that they are not to be missed. But baseball—probably the most widely and consistently advertised, with inter-city rivalries, with multiple personalities where other sports present only a few, still does not attract the "classy clan."

They are here from all corners of the country, sure enough, but they are regulars, not volunteers. Even the visitors seem professionals, somehow.

"Not Afraid"—Bush

By OWEN J. BUSH,
Manager Pirates.

"We're not afraid of any batter or any pitcher on the New York team and we'll just go in there and win. All our players are in the best possible condition and I've never seen any more pep or more fighting spirit in all my life. Our right-handed pitchers are going to fool the Yankees and our own hitters will cross up the Yankee pitching. When we come out of the game, our opponents will know they've been up against more than they bargained for. We will lick them as sure as you're alive. This isn't a threat; it's a promise. Every fellow on our team feels that way about it and you can't beat such spirit."

"Confident"—Huggins

By MILLER J. HUGGINS,
Manager Yankees.

"We are not underestimating the strength and speed of the Pirates, but the Yankees are confident they will win by reason of their heavy batting. Their practice proved that they have gauged the dimensions of the park and have secured the range to the right field wall and the stand into which they hope to knock the ball. They have improved this season. I have the utmost faith that our pitchers will hold the Pirates in check. We are well aware that a short series often is decided by the breaks of the game, but we count on coming out victorious, although we anticipate a battle."

WANER HOPES BOYS WILL COME THROUGH

By EDWARD J. NEIL,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

A father who never dreamed of raising his sons to be baseball heroes, and who doesnt think they will be when the final echoes of the 1927 world series have died away, watched over Paul and Lloyd Waner—Pittsburgh's big and little poison—today and hoped that his judgment was wrong.

He was Ora Lee Waner—"Dad"—to his boys and "Granger" to those who knew him as a crack ball player in his own youth. Along with "Ma" Waner and a married sister of the "kids," "Dad" came east for the classic series and his first sight of the youngsters since they left the several hundred acre farm in Harrah, Okla., last spring to "burn up" the National League with their sensational play.

Wise to the ways of baseball, the square-jawed, sun-tanned father of Paul, premier clouter of his circuit, and Lloyd, co-star of a gleaming outfield due in his first year "up," perched on the edge of a sofa in his son's apartment and declared regretfully that he "didn't expect much of the boys." And strangely enough, of all the Pittsburgh fandom who have followed the youngsters' flashing play this season, "Dad" Waner probably was alone in his belief.

"It's going to be the same way with Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig as well as my boys," he drawled. "The Yankees will focus all their attention on stopping Paul and Lloyd and Pittsburgh will do the same with the New York pair. I don't calculate any of the four will be heroes.

"Every ball that comes up to them

HAVEY BOYLE

THE legend of Ruth had a few years ago reached Pittsburgh. By that time his exploits had thrown him out of the human category. At that time he was something akin to a strange device which the baseball gods had contrived to toss into this worldly sphere, to amuse themselves as much as the earthlings, busy at their small tasks and small amusements, including a strange contest popularly described as baseball. The legend having grown with each recounting, the populace of the city turned out 30,000 strong to see the great wonder as he stepped, mincingly, onto the Forbes Field turf. There was great curiosity. The general temptation was to pinch at his ribs, to tickle him, to eye him closely to make certain that he was of the same general material as human beings. By that time, so great were his baseball proportions by virtue of a crazy knack for driving a white ball further than any other man ever had driven it—and more frequently—this man Ruth had taken on the aspect of a myth.

Havey Boyle.

The villagers, accustomed to ordinary wayfaring baseball men, turned out in surprising numbers to meet the great Ruth in an exhibition game, in which the great Ruth was to be the feature member of the cast. He did his stuff—knocked a home run over the centerfield wall. A small boy with a dirty face wistfully sighed: "Ah, if he should ever come here against the Pirates in a world series game." In that spurious realm of the impossible a magi, apparently, heard the voice of the small boy with the dirty face. At least some potent power of a strange realm rubbed a mystic lamp—for here today the great Bambino is thrown against the Pirates in a series, the winner of which gains the biggest prize in baseball.

RUTH is the main character of the drama which starts today in Forbes Field. His style, his manner, his slightest gesture will gain the avid attention of 41,000 and more, excited and palpitating witnesses. How he holds the bat how he walks to the plate, how he swings, how he connects with the ball, or how he misses as he swings, will attract the attention of not only the 41,000 persons who view him, but also the attention of many, many other thousands of citizens from coast to coast.

RUTH is a tall, broad man, with a tendency to aldermanic paunchiness. The moment when he quits baseball he will gain considerable weight. In physical aspect, he is a giant, long of arm strong of torso, lithe in the region of the lower limbs. His forehead is a little narrow. His nose starting apparently from nowhere leaps out a little belligerently at the base, broad. There is power denoted in the general makeup. This power nature has endowed him with has made him the talk of the baseball world.

INSTINCTIVELY he combines power of the body and acuteness of the eye, with a quality of timing for the swing that no one in the history of baseball has ever approached. The ball is, by his very nature, his instinctive enemy. The white ball floating to the plate is to him what the red flag is to the bull. The white ball infuriates this giant, armed with the long bat, clutched tightly at the end. The ball has whizzed, in his time, toward his head and toward his feet. It has attacked his body. He shows his scorn by swinging with his greatest might at this menace—and the result is fantastically enough, a strange victor who has achieved the distinction of being the most powerful, the most successful swinger the game has ever known.

ONCE an insignificant figure in an orphan asylum, Ruth has risen to the point where millionaire and statesman deem it a tribute to be listed among his acquaintances. He thus becomes a figure in life which outrivals the most fanciful dreams of dull fictionists, whose faulty imagination fix certain limits. Once, this strange creature of the fates was one of a mediocre herd; today he commands the attention of a nation.

HIS genius is so great that even Pittsburghers, anxious for a Pirate victory, cannot avoid entirely a feeling that this genius for home runs should succeed. There will be a great murmur of appluase if stalwart Pirate pitchers circumvent Ruth in his chief design, yet there will be a great roar of admiration if the Babe knocks one from the park into the adjacent park.

A WORLD series containing Ruth—without a Rutherian home-run or two—would be like Hamlet without the Dane. Having hoped to see Ruth in a world series clash with the Pittsburgh forces, Pittsburgh fans, loyal as they are, will not be quite content without the proof of Ruth's genius.

THE Bambino does not belong only to New York. He belongs to the baseball world. Pirate fans trust that his homeric effort will not disrupt Pirate chances for victory, but so universal is the appeal of the Bambino that there is not a man, woman or child who does not hope that some time during the games in Pittsburgh he or she will see the splendor of Ruth's unrivalled talent for hitting home runs.

THE appeal of the great figure of baseball—the greatest figure that ever has adorned the baseball stage—is such that while Pittsburghers hope he will be circumvented in the "clinches," there is hardly Pittsburgher who does not wish the Babe will clout one over a fence t make new history here.

Babe Isn't Only Star

By Joe Harris

Pirate First Baseman, Former American League Star and Hero of Senators in 1925 World Series.

QUITE a few of my friends, who have never seen the New York Yankees in action, have asked me for information on characteristics and actions of many of the boys who will oppose us in the big battles starting today.

Babe Ruth's style appears to be well known wherever baseball is played, but not so much is known regarding the general movements of athletes like Mark Koenig, Joe Dugan, Tony Lazzeri, Lou Gehrig, Earl Combs and one or two others.

Koenig and Lazzeri are a scrappy pair around the keystone sack, and they are capable. Although Mark and Tony are not real big fellows, they are rangy boys and they know how to handle a ball. These clever youngsters are not as smooth in their work as were Roger Peckinpaugh and Bucky Harris, but I have never seen anybody in the game that could handle a ball like that pair.

The Fighting Wop is a smart player who hustles all the time, and Tony has to be worked on with caution. He will miss a lot of swings, but he has a habit of giving the ball a ride if he gets a pitch in his alley. Koeny does not drive a ball as far as Tony, and he is a batter who hits from both sides of the plate, according to the style of pitching.

Joe Dugan, not so many years ago, was rated as the best third baseman in the American League. Joe, however, has had some trouble with his legs. Judging by his actions of yesterday, Dugan is in fair shape, at least, for the series, and he is a capable, resourceful infielder when he is right. He makes fine plays on bunts and is sure-handed.

Gehrig needs no comment as a batter. As a fielder he is much more effective than he might appear to be at first sight. Lou throws with his left hand, and for a big fellow he moves around lightly.

Earl Combs, to my mind, is a winning type of player, although you don't hear so much about him. On many other teams, the work of the centerfielder would stand out, but other headliners in the Yankee lineup eclipse him.

All in all, however, I don't think the Pirates have to take a back seat from the Yankees, and I think the series will see the Buccos in a very creditable showing. With a fair share of the breaks we ought to win.

SPORT COMMENT

mosphere. There is the old game of ballyhoo, too, that does its part in stirring up the crowds. It isn't overlooked in baseball any more than it is in the fight game. For several years many of the more conservative have been strongly of the opinion that the world series was being annually overplayed, that it should not cause all the commotion that generally marks its course.

Yet it continues to grow and grow with each succeeding year, and the only limit to the attendance appears to be the capacity of the parks.

FOR convincing evidence of the growth of baseball itself and of the world series in particular you need only look back to the revival of the post-season championship games by the Pirates and Red Sox in 1903. That series—and it lasted eight games—drew only such small crowds that the receipts totaled little over $50,000, or slightly above $6,000 to a game.

The share of the winning Boston players in that series was only $1,182, while the share of the losing Pittsburgh players was $1,316. The oddity that the defeated players received more money than the victorious athletes was due to the fact that President Barney Dreyfuss [illegible] Pittsburgh club gave his owner's share to his players.

Since then the series has [illegible] to such an extent that the total receipts are now annually expected to reach the million dollar mark, and the share of a single player on the winning side may approximate $6,000.

THAT'S how the series has grown from a sort of side show to a mammoth circus in the 24 years that have elapsed since the Pittsburgh Nationals and Boston Americans revived it in 1903, after post-season competition had lapsed since the withdrawal of the Temple cup.

The latter trophy offered annually for a series between the first and second teams in the National League, at the end of the season, and was withdrawn by the late W. C. Temple of Pittsburgh, its donor, when it was suspected the players were "jockeying" in order to draw out the series as long as possible and thus fatten their own "intake," as they were permitted to share in all games even if the series went the limit of seven contests.

BY the way, that is the explanation of why the players now share in only the first four games of the world series each fall. The step restricting the pastimers' financial interest to the first four games was taken as a safeguard against possible jobbery.

The magnates may have felt confident enough that the modern players are sufficiently honest to do their best from the start and to try to wind up the series as quickly as possible for the sake of winning the world title and the 60 per cent that goes to the winner in the division of the contending teams' portion of the players' pool.

But at the same time they decided to take no chances and to keep the athletes away from temptation.

IF the players had been permitted to share in all seven games, when the series was made an annual fixture, the way would have been left open for some of the unscrupulous ones to suggest dividing their pool evenly on the side instead of playing on a 60-40 basis, and then to let the series run the full seven games, or perhaps work in a tie game or two besides.

As it is now, the players do not get a nickel after the fourth game, and as ball players as a rule are not overly fond of working for nothing, it is to their own best interest to end the series as quickly as possible.

The result is that the big series is fought on the level, which is a mighty good thing for baseball and another reason why the world series such as opens in Pittsburgh today, is the "greatest show on earth." But for that the color and atmosphere in evidence today would be missing.

And his outlook is a roseate one. Carmen Hill is one of the two bespectacled pitchers of the Pirates who will battle the Yankees in the world series beginning today. He'll probably start one of the games and should be tough to beat.

BETTING

There was a sporadic movement last night in hotel lobbies and the gathering places of those willing to back their own and other folks' opinions with cash, toward 10 to 7½ odds on the Yankees for the first game. A few big bets were made at 10 to 8 and at 8 to 5 on today's game and on the Yankees to win the series.

Pittsburgh, for the most part, is willing to give the Buccos their moral support, but they won't "say it with cash." These Yankee fencebusters have the boys worried, and rightly so.

The ticket situation, with the scalpers and licensed operators handling vast blocks of seats, had the general run of fans in an uproar. Early last night the crowd began to gather before the windows at Forbes Field, where the general admission tickets were placed on sale today, and by midnight a long line was in position.

The city police department walloped the speculators when Police Superintendent Peter Walsh ordered his men to arrest the proprietors of all places selling world series tickets.

PENN AND ARMY LIKELY TO MEET ON GRIDIRON

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—(INS.)—The news that the University of Pennsylvania football eleven will probably play the Army here in 1929 and 1930 today stirred the Pennsylvania football crowd. Maj. Phillip Fleming, who has charge of athletics at West Point, visited this city yesterday. He announced that a game with Penn was in the making.

COACH BOLES SHINES AT WOOSTER COLLEGE

WOOSTER, O., Oct. 5.—There is only one reason given here for the splendid showing which the Wooster College football team made against Ashland Saturday and that is Coach Boles. Given only an outside chance to defeat Ashland's veteran team, the Boles-coached outfit came through with a 28-to-0 win.

WANT JACK FOR FIGHT IN WEST

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—In the event that Jack Dempsey chooses to return to the ring, his next battle, according to intimate friends of the former heavyweight champion, will be fought at the Tia Juana race track under Sunny Jim Coffroth's promotion.

Dempsey, it is said, has already assured Coffroth that he is eager to strut his stuff somewhere on the Pacific coast for a change inasmuch as he hasn't performed out that way since Willie Meehan whipped him in 1918, a year before he won the title from Jess Willard at Toledo.

Sunny Jim, according to our informant, is anxious to show the Manassa Mauler against Tom Heeney, Phil Scott, Paulino, Delaney or Risko. Coffroth contemplates staging the match on Thanksgiving Day, the day before the bow-wows start galloping at his track.

Arrangements can be made, we are informed, to seat approximately 75,000 or more, if necessary. As high as $100 can be charged for the ringside seats, as there is no law limiting the prices which can be charged.

Although Tex Rickard originally planned to keep Dempsey out of harness until next spring, it is likely now that he may alter his plans and put in a healthy bid for Jack to do his bit in the Garden this winter, rather than lose his services even temporarily.

Star Infield Broken Up

KANSAS CITY, Oct., 5.—(AP.)—Announcement that Howard Freigau, third baseman of the Kansas City American Association club, has been drafted by the Brooklyn Nationals, broke up the infield credited with keeping the local team in the pennant race until the final game. Joe Hauser, first baseman, goes to the Philadelphia Americans next Spring.

would be able to get away from their work only long enough to see one game, are disappointed, some of them bitterly.

Why, then, to prevent a yearly repetition of such a condition, could not the present plan of disposing of the tickets be abandoned in favor of one which would tend to distribute the pasteboards over a wider area and to the greater general satisfaction of the public?

Along these lines, it would seem that a system somewhat like the following would work out much better than the one in vogue:

(1) Have the contending clubs set a date on which they will begin to receive applications.

(2) Have all ticket mail stamped with time of arrival and stacked in order.

(3) Set a deadline on the time for receiving applications.

(4) Limit each applicant to two tickets for one game to begin with, and start at the head of the mailing list.

(5) Fill as many orders as possible for the first game and then continue through the mail with pairs of tickets for the second and third games.

(6) If any tickets are left after all the requests have been filled, go back to the head of the list and start all over again.

This plan would involve considerably more labor and expense than the present one, but it would be worth while in the good will that would accrue to the club and the general favorable attitude toward Organized Baseball.

Really there is no reason why a select group of fans should see ALL OF THE GAMES and others, just as anxious to sit in on the classic, should be deprived of an opportunity of seeing AT LEAST ONE GAME.

We respectfully recommend a new working plan along the above lines to Commissioner Landis and his associates.

in practice, but elevate their sights and hit more perpendicular when they go down in the records. After practice the Pirates held the usual pre-world's series confab in the club house with Pilot Donie Bush as chief speaker of the house.

The strategic manner of attack and defense was carefully outlined and the pitchers were given available information to equip them with a required knowledge of the Yank hitters, so that they may be able to spike the big guns of that club.

The whole crew is beaming over with enthusiasm, confidence reigns supreme, a good omen just before a supreme test. Win or lose we are going to put up a great fight, so let the bell ring and may the best club win.

World Series Notes

By LES CONKLIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

THE most henpecked husband in America lives in Pittsburgh and his wife is a rabid baseball fan. She sent him down to the ball park at 3 o'clock this morning and made him stand for eight hours to hold her place in the ticket line.

At 11 o'clock the line of fans waiting to purchase standing room in the of waiting many of thermometers grand stand and bleachers stretched half way around the park. After hours of waiting many of them could stand the strain no longer and bought tickets from the scalpers, although it meant putting most of their personal belongings in hock.

Even in front of the newspaper score boards, crowds began forming well before 11 o'clock.

A well-known Pittsburgh bootlegger, sitting in a field box, was looking rather pale around the gills. His wary customers now make him sample his wares before they do any purchasing, it is rumored.

A false note in the proceedings was sounded when Nick Altrock and Al Schacht, Washington comedians, led a 22-piece band. The bleacherites, basking in a warm sun, applauded wildly.

Holders of reserved seats slept late. Two hours before game time, hardly more than 100 spectators were in the grandstand.

There was quite an uproar at one of the entrances to the park just before batting practice started. Police were told that a boy was trying to force his way past the ticket chopper. Upon investigation they found the intruder to be Miller Huggins.

Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis, with his white hair freshly shampooed, but his famous world series hat still unblocked, judicially surveyed the festivities from a field box.

Marcus Arelius "Koenig was in his best world series form and messed up several grounders in fielding practice. Mark, who was the official goat of last year's series, will have a good alibi if he spills the beans here. The Pittsburgh infield is harder than a bride's biscuit and grounders travel across it like a rifle shot.

Urban Shocker, New York's expert, was munching apples instead of cutting. Shocker rushed out and bought a basket of fruit when Herb Pennock, his buddy, was injured yesterday. When Pennock protested that he was not hurt seriously, Urb decided to keep the fruit himself.

Cedric Durst, a substitute whose line drive felled Pennock, one of the Yankees' aces, was a tragic figure. Durst is worrying himself sick because the unfortunate accident may ruin New York's chances.

(By the Associated Press.)

This world series battle won't be any tougher than a few that Joe Harris and John Miljus, two Pirate stars, have experienced. Joe and John were bunk-mates in the A. E. F. They fought through the war with the Three Hundred and Twentieth Infantry, Headquarters Company of the Eightieth (Blue Ridge) division, seeing especially hot action during the Argonne offensive in September, 1918.

"One eye" Connelly, self-styled "world's champion gate-crasher," arrived with the prediction that the Pirates would win the first game but that the Yankees would capture the series.

Among the freak bets recorded was one that Babe Ruth strikes out more times than he hits home runs. The Bambino can do either with about equal vehemence.

The speed of "Big Ben" Paschal, substitute Yankee outfielder, amazed Pittsburgh fans who saw him chasing fly balls. "Watch that big fellow run," said a close observer as the 190-pound Paschal dashed about. The outfielder stole 34 bases in one season with Atlanta in the Southern Association, before he became understudy to Babe Ruth.

Rabbits' Feet Are Plentiful

By CORINNE RICH,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

HALF a hundred great baseball players polished up their pet superstititions here today as the last touch to preparations for the opening of the world series.

Superstititions, yes—rabbit's foot and all the rest; for baseball players are about the most superstitious folks in the world.

You believe you are witnessing a feat of science and supreme skill when you spend your last dollar for admission to a series game, but any of those players you yell your head off at would tell you that the outcome is a matter of "getting the breaks," pure and simple.

Like the men who are blazing the trail in aviation, the fellows who twirl the ball woo lady luck to a fare-ye-well. If they believe she is not with them they will not play.

And so today when the big games open, drawing thousands of fans from all over the country, the Yanks and the Pirates will have paid tribute to their favorite luck charms and pushed behind them their most-feared jinx.

Some players hitch their belts in a certain fashion when on the diamond. Some tap their heels with the bat before the first ball comes their way. Others make a cross with the bat over the home plate for luck.

MANY WON'T CHEW GUM

A lot of them won't chew gum during a game; a lot of others take a fresh chew of tobacco before going to the bat. Many carry good luck emblems and all are deathly afraid of "wamby," which is "baseball" for any sort of jinx.

Earl Smith, catcher of the Pirates, is credited with coining the expression "wamby." It refers directly to the motion of the hand by which coaches along the sidelines disconcert the batters and has come to include in its dire implication any sort of bad luck.

Teams in line for a pennant refuse to pose for a photograph until the coveted prize is actually in their hands; for, well, it's not considered a good omen in the best baseball circles to count your chickens until they're at least half grown.

The Pirates caused the newspapers no end of trouble this year on that score. Sport editors, with the Yanks group already in type, were crying for the Pittsburgh team's likeness too. Sure, the Buccaneers were as good as pennant winners, it was argued. Why haggle over the last game or two, sure things as they were?

But haggle the Buccaneers did and just the same that picture did not see the light until the last game was actually won.

HILL SUPERSTITIOUS

It's the same with individual players. Take Carmen Hill, for instance, that long, spectacled Pirate. Do you think he would "sit" for any camera on the day he is to pitch? Not he.

He'd be "Wamby-ed" sure.

They say in sport circles here that the reason Cuyler, one of the stars of the Pirates, may not play tomorrow lies away back in the young man's superstition.

He does not want second place in the lineup. He wants to play a bit farther down the line, say, third or fourth place, because second place for him, they say he thinks, is the worst of luck.

And so it goes. The great Eddie Collins, the Athletics' second baseman, called chewing gum his lady luck. He never entered a game, those who know say, without a hunk of it stuck tight to the button on his cap.

The Babe himself, while perhaps not so definitely attached to omens, does believe in "the breaks."

DAD WANER

will have everything the pitchers can put on it. The pitchers won't work so hard on some of the other stars and there's where the heroes will pop up. But I kind of hope my boys will come through just the same."

Years ago when the boys, and an older brother, Ralph, were developing their batting eyes by trying to "fan" each other with corn cobs while using broomsticks for bats, "Dad" thought that Paul some day might make a ballplayer. Paul was the older, the more reliable, while Lloyd was faster, but inclined toward the spectacular.

"Paul was only 12 years old then and Lloyd about 9, but I guess before they got a regular baseball they must have hit a million of those broken up corn cobs, only about two inches long, out back of the barn on the farm. The cobs would jiggle, and dance, and jump every which way, but they got so they could nail them every time.

"I used to scold them and try to make them stop cluttering up my barnyard, but it did no good. Then I got to watching them duck after those things darting in and out and I decided that they were better batters than their dad."

Here Dad Waner stopped to confess that from 1896 to 1900 he was "quite some shakes of a player" himself on the Oklahoma City team before the Western League was formed. In fact the teams about Ada, of which Harrah is just a crossroads, were just about composed of the "Waners and the Beavers" after dad took to playing independent ball. The Waner boys' mother is a Beaver.

However, when dad married he gave up baseball because the job of raising a family on an Oklahoma farm left little time for the national game in those days. And while he gained most of his fame as a pitcher, father Waner admits he was "long on left field and had it down pat."

CAMPERS' STOVE BAKES 100 FLAPJACKS AT TIME

A stove made in Seattle for an Oregon lumber camp will bake 100 pancakes at a time. With a fireman and chief and co-chefs to operate it, it is expected that the stove will finally make it possible to fill up a bunch of tree-choppers almost three times a day.

THE OLD AND THE NEW

LLOYD WANER MAX CAREY PAUL WANER

Picture snapped at Forbes Field yesterday during Pirates' last workout for the world series opening today shows the former Pirate captain and star between the popular Waner boys. Carey still was a member of the Corsair brigade when it battled the Washington Senators in the world series of 1925.

MOTOR SQUARE CARD NAMED

A card of four eight-round bouts will be presented the boxing fans at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, instead of the usual ten-round windup, eight-round semi-final and two six-round preliminaries, it was announced today by Johnny Ray, matchmaker for the club.

Cuddy DeMarco, McKeesport lightweight, will try to avenge his knockout defeat by Billy Wallace when he tackles the hard-hitting Clevelander again in the main event.

Rudy Ceder, Tarentum welterweight, will box Harry Harris of Niles, O., in the semi-final; Kid Crutchfield and Sam Hunter, heavyweight Negro rivals of the Hill district, will box the second event, and Patsy Gallagher, South Side featherweight, will meet the best opponent obtainable, likely Joey Katkish of Lawrenceville, in the opening number.

TOLEDO LEADS LITTLE SERIES

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Managers of the two rivals for the "little world series" have run the gamut of their pitching talent and today they returned to the twirling selections of the inaugural game last Friday, Jess Barnes for Toledo and Leo Mangum for Buffalo, for the fifth contest.

Except for Profitt's winning exhibition last Sunday, the work of Mangum has been most effective against the Mud Hens. The score today stood three games to one in favor of Toledo, with games here today and tomorrow and the rest of the nine-game series, if necessary, at Buffalo. Toledo won yesterday, 6 to 5.

The probable lineup today follows:

N. Y. Speculators Ask Big Prices For Seats

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Speculators were demanding as high as $25 a ticket today for the three world series games to be played at the Yankee stadium. What is more, they were getting what they demanded.

Despite the precautions taken by the Yankee club, hundreds of tickets fell into the hands of speculators. Sets of $5.50 seats for the three games, which "retailed" at $16.50, brought $75 and no questions asked.

Box seats, which were sold by the Yankees for $19.80 a set, brought as high as $100.

There is still hope to beat the ticket gougers, however. The unreserved $3.30 seats will go on sale at 10 o'clock on the morning of each game. Last year plenty of these seats were available for the last two games and the same situation may exist this year, too.

YANK WOMEN SHINE IN CANADIAN TOURNEY

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 5.—(AP.)—United States golfers dominated the field by a margin of two to one in today's second round of play for the Canadian women's championship over the Lambton Country Club course. Whereas Canada and the United States each placed 15 players in the qualifying round, the Dominion had only five left today to 10 by the United States.

All the favorites were left in the running.

Miss Glenna Collett, of Providence, R. I., is on her game and so far has seemed to be the best in the field. She defeated Miss Eileen Kinsella, of Montreal, by 7 and 6.

WESLEYAN FEARS GAME WITH SALEM FRIDAY

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., Oct. 5.—Will Wesleyan be able to score a win over Salem College Friday? That is one question that remains unsettled in the local football world today. It is true that Wesleyan was a much improved team in the New York game, having in mind the showing made against the Mountaineers, but Salem's slaughtering of Fairmont Normal last Friday easily displays the prowess of the Seventh Day lads.

FIGHT RESULTS

At New York — Izzy Schwartz defeated Blas Rodriguez, 10 rounds.

At Des Moines, Ia.—Irwin Bige defeated Emil Morrow, 10 rounds; Pinkie George defeated Bobby Hughes, 10 rounds; Tommy Maroon defeated Harry Soo Quong, 10 rounds.

At St. Petersburg, Fla.—Jimmy Russell won by technical knockout over Louis Pins, 9 rounds.

At Jersey City.—Bobby Garcia won by technical knockout over Billy White, 6 rounds.

At Los Angeles—Johnny Hill won by technical knockout over Vic Foley, 8 rounds.

Herman Layne, outfielder for the Indianapolis team of the American Association, married Miss Norene Fisher, while Harry Layne, outfielder for Syracuse in the International League, was wedded to Miss Geraldine Dyer.

The total of new state and municipal financing for the nine months ending September 30, was $1,126,136,577. This is the highest total for the first three-quarters of any year since 1915, with the exception of the first nine months of 1924, when the total of municipal bond flotations was $1,136,763,042. This figure represents an increase of $88,191,645 over the amount for the first nine months of 1926. The following table shows the volume of state and municipal bond flotations in September and the nine months period ending September 30 for the past 10 years:

Local Steel Making Average.

Pittsburgh steel mills are averaging between 55 and 58 per cent of capacity with some small plants operating open hearths only one-third. Carnegie Steel Company's No. 3 furnace at New Castle has been blown out, leaving 21 out of 31 stacks blowing. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation blew out one of its Aliquippa stacks in the middle of September. The Sharpsville Furnace Company stack still is banked.

Chevrolet Ahead of 1926.

Chevrolet's production for the first 9 months this year is more than 841,000 cars, as compared with [illegible] cars during the corresponding period of 1926.

American Woolen Lifts Prices.

American Woolen Company has advanced prices 5 cents a yard on three womens' wear worsted fabrics for spring delivery.

Snyder's Pig Iron Index.

Average prices of steel making pig iron in September were the lowest of any month since November, 1915. Sales of Bessemer pig iron in September averaged $18 a ton compared with $18.21 a ton in August and $19.35 a ton in September, 1926, according to figures compiled by W. P. Snyder & Co. Basic pig iron averaged $17.583 in September compared with $17.25 in August and $17.50 in September, 1926. Trend of monthly average prices has been downward since April.

Young Reserve Board Governor.

Roy A. Young, former governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, has taken office as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, succeeding D. R. Crissinger of Ohio. He has been designated governor of the board.

American Gas and Electric.

Electric output of American Gas and Electric Company for week ended October 1 totaled 41,656,141 kwh., a gain of 4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

Why the List is Two-Sided.

One observing broker holds that the reason business is giving a fairly good account of itself in the face of a falling off in certain lines of industry, like steel, is that other lines that have been in the dumps are beginning to show signs of life. He calls attention to improvement in the copper, leather, textile, cotton, rubber tire and harvester industries. The fall in some lines has been offset by further gains in others. The fact that the oil industry has been depressed does not mean that there has been an increase in the number of unemployed depending on the industry. Increased production and consumption mean increased employment.

Tidal Osage Oil.

Net crude oil production of Tidal Osage Oil Company averaged 13,949 barrels daily during the first six months of 1927. Average daily net production for July was 10,699 barrels and for August 9,363 barrels. All the company's production is high gravity oil, for which the posted price during the first six months of the year averaged $1.62, compared with present price of $1.31 a barrel. Tidal Osage Oil has a little more than 500,000 barrels of crude oil in storage, and adequate empty tankage to care for all its production this year, for which it will not have ready sale through its established pipe line connections.

Seminole Output Higher.

Seminole production of crude oil in 24 hours ended 7 a. m., October 4, amounted to 455,477 barrels, an increase of 4,477 barrels over the preceding day.

Wholesale Index Advances.

Wholesale prices advanced in September for the third consecutive month, Bradstreet's Index Number for October 1 standing at $13.2447, an increase of 2.8 per cent over the preceding month. This figure was the highest reached by the index since March 1, 1926, and shows an advance of 7.1 per cent over the low point for 1927, touched on July 1. Provisions accounted for most of the gain in the general level, but leather also recorded increases, although hides were unchanged. In all, six groups, including live stock, provisions, fruits, hides and leather, textiles and oils, went higher during the month, while seven went lower, these being breadstuffs, metals, coal and coke, naval stores, building materials, chemicals and drugs and miscellaneous products. Of 106 commodities quoted, 36 registered increases, 27 showed decreases and 43 were unchanged in price.

September Car Loadings.

No Soviet Deals Made.

Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, New York, made the following statement to the Wall Street Journal's London representative yesterday: "I had several conversations with financial representatives of the Soviet government, at the invitation of the Russians. The conversations had no results. There are no negotiations in progress now, and if any arise later they will be entirely new discussions. I am not interested in new financing for Russia until the old debts are settled."

Bituminous Output Up.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production for the week ended October 1 at 10,250,000 net tons against 9,871,000 net tons for the week of September 24.

Buick's September Shipments.

Buick Motor Company shipped 24,660 cars in September against 19,162 in September, 1926. October production schedule is 25,000 cars.

Water Works Earned $3.10.

American Water Works and Electric reports for 12 months ended August 31 consolidated net income of $5,286,453 after all charges equal to $3.10 a share on the 1,361,411 common shares, against $3,835,184, or $2.20 a share on the number of common shares which would have been outstanding on the basis of present capitalization in the same period last year.

American Express.

American Express went higher on purchases credited to banking interests who are contemplating one of the biggest deals in the foreign banking field. Because of the increasing business of the American Express Company and European travel, American Express has earned enormous dividends which can no longer be plowed back into the company. The New York Central owns a big block of his stock and is said to be increasing its holdings. The Central is understood to have made a private bid for an additional block of the stock considerably above the market. The American Express Company is to be divided into two units—one an express company and the other a banking corporation. A big cash dividend will probably be declared. Present holders of American Express, therefore, would receive a share of the express stock and a share of the banking stock, both of which may net the holder $14 a year in dividends.

American Can.

American Can was in demand again. The new move is based on the big developments in the uses of cans and tin boxes for food products and candy. This comes from the aggressive campaign that the company has made for the use of sanitary cans and preservation of food products.

Beechnut Pushing Up.

A move is on in Beechnut. The company is expected to acquire a profitable contract with two of the biggest chain store systems in the country. These chains will handle various of the Beechnut products, thereby insuring a big increase in Beechnut sales. The stock is one of the few which has not been exploited. The two chain stores systems will take over a large block of the stock and hold it as an investment for 10 years.

Brokers' Loans.

The increase in brokers' loans of $141,000,000 looks big to the layman, but when it is taken into consideration that the total $3,914,000,000 represents only 5 per cent of the securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, these figures are not so startling as they look. To the banker and investor they seem very small when the growth of the corporations whose stocks are listed on the exchange are considered.

Bank of Italy.

It was reported at San Francisco that directors of the Bank of Italy when they meet next Monday will declare a 75 per cent stock dividend. It is also understood plans are for the issue of $100,000,000 of additional stock which will be offered at $175 a share.

Dome Mines Production.

Dome Mines, Ltd., production in September was $326,622, against $330,436 in August and $324,774 in September, 1926. For the September quarter production totaled $984,813, against $943,013 in third quarter of previous year.

Record Total of Concerns to Pay Better Dividends.

By B. C. FORBES

SEPTEMBER brought the best dividend record, with one exception, this year. The showing, indeed, was better than for any month last year or the year before except for December in each case, always the banner month for increased disbursements. For the nine months of this year no fewer than 755 companies have declared some form of better dividend. This compares with 669 for the first three-quarters of last year, 514 in 1925 and 417 in 1924.

WHILE it is true that more and more companies are being organized and that, therefore, new dividend-payers are constantly entering the lists, yet such new companies accounted for only 25 of last month's total of 104. September last year had a total of 85, in 1925 the total was 82 and in 1924 only 48.

This table shows the encouraging dividend changes announced last month by industrial, public utility and railroad companies.

	Ind.	P.U.	R.R.
Extra	53	4	0
Initial	21	4	0
Increased	7	3	0
Stock	7	3	0
Totals	94	14	0

It will be noted that no railroad figured in the month's record. On the other hand, one road, West Jersey and Seashore, reduced its rate.

Speaking of dividend reductions and omissions, the September showing in this respect was not altogether satisfactory. Unfavorable announcements came from 21 companies, the highest monthly total of the year. This brought the nine months' total to 131.

EXTRA dividends have been declared so far this year by no fewer than 292 industrial companies, 16 public utility companies and 12 railway companies. Initial payments rank second, with 121 industrial, 30 utility and 3 rail. Ninety industrial companies were able to increase their rates, also 23 utility and 7 railroads.

The nine months' compilation follows:

	Ind.	P.U.	R.R.

THESE figures are, of course, very encouraging. They do bear out, however, the now widely recognized fact that, whereas many companies are doing better than ever before, not a few are finding it impossible to maintain their net earnings. Broadly, the trend favors big, strong enterprises, especially where mass production is feasible. Apparently manufacturing in the United States is now more widely on a mass production basis than ever before. That there has set in a similar trend in merchandising is suggested by the relative showings made by chain and mail-order houses and by independent merchants. It would be rash to assume, however, as some do, that the individual store, the individual business, is doomed in this country. There is no adequate evidence to indicate that it will become impossible for able, alert, progressive merchants to hold their own against any and all competition. Incidentally, there is a pronounced movement towards the forming of chains of department stores, a movement that promises to develop impressive proportions.

ONE gratifying reflection is that each year brings the distributions of dividends among a larger number of investors. The utility industry alone estimates that it now has some 5,000,000 security holders. The total holding industrial stocks and bonds must be quite as large, if not larger. Add to this the holders of railway securities, and you arrive at a total well in excess of 10,000,000—probably nearer 12,000,000, or one for every two families in the land.

BUYING ORDERS STABILIZE MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—A good cushion of buying orders was provided in today's stock market to absorb the shock of overnight selling inspired by the unexpectedly large increase of $241,000,000 in Stock Exchange member loans last month. Prices sold down 1 to 4 points at the opening but quickly started upward again.

The recovery was checked temporarily when the call money rate was marked up to 4 per cent. U. S. Steel common sagged to around the morning's low and several others slipped back a point or more from their early high. Trading slowed up considerably during the early afternoon but a fairly firm undertone was maintained.

The chief trade news of the day was a reported increase of 2½ per cent in the mill operations of the U. S. Steel Corporation. Directors of the South Porto Rican Sugar Company declares a stock dividend of 10 per cent and rumors of stock split-ups were reported to be pending in several other issues, particularly Midland Steel Products preferred.

Northwestern rails were again in fair demand in expectation of good September earnings statements. Bullish activities also were quite pronounced in a number of specialties, including American Can, Pittsburgh Coal, American Express, Houston Oil and International Harvester.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Despite unfavorable weather and predictions of more, wheat and corn both averaged lower in price early today. No sustained demand from buyers was in evidence, and scattered speculative selling turned values downward. Opening at ¼@⅜c decline, wheat rallied to above yesterday's finish and later sagged again. Corn started unchanged to ¼c off, recovered somewhat and then underwent a material setback. Oats held about steady. Provisions were steady.

Relative weakness of wheat quotations at Liverpool today gave an advantage at times to the selling side of the market here. Apparent absence of important immediate new export business counted also as a weight on values and so too did hedging pressure from the northwest. In this connection bears contended that for at least the time being demand was at a minimum and the supply virtually a maximum.

Declines in the corn market today were not only in the face of unfavorable weather conditions but notwithstanding reports at hand which were construed to indicate that the amount of this year's crop which is merchantable may go as low as 1,800,000,000 bushels. Such a total, it was pointed out, will be the smallest since 1903.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was easy today with a sale confirmed of 11,400 bags of Philippines nearby to a local refiner at 4.45c delivered, representing a decline of 3-32nd cent from the last previous sale. The decision in the spot market and easier London market inspired early selling in the raw sugar futures and prices sagged 1 to 2 points. Some selling was attributed to houses with European and trade connections, but on covering and new buying on the decline, prices regained early losses and at midday had net gains of 1 to 2 points. A fair inquiry was reported for refined sugar at unchanged prices, from 5.90 to 6.10c for fine granulated.

The officers of the new firm are: Kirk W. Todd, president; C. A. Anderson, vice president; S. K. Cunningham, treasurer, and C. M. Smith, secretary. Mr. Todd and Mr. Cunningham were charter members of the Pittsburgh Bond Club. Mr. Smith was connected with the firm of Dinkey & Todd several years.

COURTESY ATTENTION

CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, chairman of the board of directors of the New York Central Railroad, is fond of telling of the first $100 which he saved and deposited sixty-three years ago in a savings bank at Peekskill, New York. He has never touched or added to that deposit, but once a year he calls at the Peekskill Savings Bank and asks to be shown the balance, including accrued interest. The original $100 has grown to over $1,100.

Can you think of anything more convincing of the wisdom of opening a Savings Account? It is not necessary to make a deposit of $100; $1.00 will open a Savings Account and on that deposit and all others you will receive interest at the rate of 4% per annum, computed and credited semi-annually.

STANDARD SANITARY SELLS AT NEW HIGH

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The unsettled tone in many other markets late Tuesday and the developments in connection with brokers' loans caused an overflow of the selling movement into the curb market today. Many stocks were hurriedly sold at sharp declines for a time in the forenoon when losses were sustained ranging from 1 to over 5 points in nearly all of the active list. The weak factors in the situation, however, were not of a character to disturb trading positions here and after a short time bullish activities were resumed and the trading generally showed a steadier tone.

Some issues were strong at the opening. Bancitaly, starting iwth a gain of 8 points at a new record of 118, and after sharp drop to 112 rallied to 115. Buying was accompanied by predictions that another stock dividend would soon be declared.

Railroad issues were generally in supply and there were some weak specialties in the early trading. Celluloid declined 4 points and Tubize Artificial Silk had an early loss of 8 points.

Public utilities ranged about a point lower in the early trading and then started on a recovery.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Following is the official list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded (000 omitted in sales column in bond list):

New York Bond Market

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Firmness characterized the bond market today, with trading in fair volume. Italian issues again furnished the individual feature, advancing on heavy buying, especially the governmental 7s, which reached a new peak of 99¼. Roman 6½s sold within striking distance of their high record.

Demand for high grade rails was again brisk, although there were no wide advances. Mobile and Ohio 4½s and Erie general lien 4s were relatively active around their peak prices, but Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s retreated slightly from their maximum established yesterday.

Pressed Steel Car 5s were again firm on plans to reform the company's capital structure, but other industrials and the public utility mortgages were quiet.

United States government bonds were steady and rather dull.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, (000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

WEEK'S FREIGHT LOADINGS DECREASE 49,539 CARS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Loading of revenue freight for the week ended September 24 totaled 1,125,368 cars, a decrease of 49,539 cars from the same week last year, but an increase of 4,543 over 1925, the American Railway Association announces.

A decrease of 1,745 cars from the previous week was shown. Freight cars in need of repair on September 15 totaled 141,911, or 6.2 per cent of the number on line.

Lone Star Loses Early Gain

Stocks were strong and active at the opening of the session on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today with two of the most prominent issues in the list establishing new highs in the initial dealings. Standard Sanitary displayed the most pronounced strength with sales at 99 as compared with yesterday's high of 97.

This is a new high for the year and exceeds the August high by two points, the price of 97 achieved at that time being the apex of an upturn which followed a severe reaction during the spring and early summer. Traders were without specific information to account for the current strength in Standard but it is understood the shares will be listed on the New York Stock Exchange shortly and a much broader market provided.

Lone Star Gas began the day at a new high record for all time, $51 a share, but this figure attracted offerings which forced an early reaction after which the price settled and the general tone improved. Lone Star was well bought yesterday, according to reports in the Street, and such stock as came out on the upturn was easily absorbed.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass firmed up on light trading, recovering to 220 as compared with sales at 218 early in the week. Pittsburgh Brewing common jumped from 2¼ to 3, but not much stock was available. Following the sale at 3 there were offerings at 4 but no takers appeared. The preferred was offered at 10.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 3 points, but weakened after the call under renewed liquidation, southern and local selling, stimulated by increases in private crop estimates and a favorable weather map.

December sold off to 20.85c and March to 21.15c, about 34 points net lower, but trade buying on scale down orders and covering checked the decline and caused rallies of a few points by the end of the first hour.

The weekly weather report was about a standoff, but seemed to bring in a little buying at the decline.

Three private crop reports gave condition figures ranging from 51.7 to 53.8 and on the indicated crop from 12,655,000 up to 13,334,000 bales.

Moderate rallies appeared to meet further southern selling and liquidation and the decline extended to 20.81c for December and 21.15c for March, or about 32 to 38 points net lower. Some stop orders were uncovered and selling became less active. At midday the market was quiet at rallies of about 9 to 10 points from the lowest. Another private crop report made the condition 53.8 and the indicated yield 12,655,000 bales.

A life insurance trust is the safe way to furnish complete protection for those you love

¶ A life insurance trust is an arrangement whereby you make your life insurance policies payable to this institution for the use and benefit of those whom you desire to protect.

¶ You may revoke it, or change any of its provisions, at any time while you live. Under the arrangement, you may give to us full authority to use our own judgment as situations arise, or you may give specific instructions which we will carry out.

¶ The usual custom is to make provision for us to pay a stated income to heirs, with authority to use additional amounts for unexpected happenings, such as sickness.

¶ A certain sum from the insurance proceeds may be set aside for the education of minor children, to be held by us until they arrive at college age.

¶ Provision may be made for a wedding present to a daughter when she marries.

¶ Careless tendencies of thoughtless children may be curbed by permitting us to use our judgment as to the amounts they shall receive, holding back, if necessary, the major sums until they arrive at an age of greater discretion.

¶ Time may alter the status of your favorite charities. Provisions may be made permitting us to exercise our discretion as to their continued worthiness.

WITH any Life Insurance Trust drawn with the Peoples Savings and Trust Company of Pittsburgh as Trustee goes the whole-hearted, friendly co-operation of the oldest organization of its kind in Pittsburgh, the dominating thought being to act for you, as we believe you would act for yourself, were you personally caring for the welfare and financial safety of those you love. Our Trust Officers will be glad to discuss with you, without the slightest obligation on your part, how such an arrangement can best promote the future welfare and safety of your family.

SCHLEE, FETED, COLLAPSES AT BANQUET

DETROIT, Oct. 5—(AP)—A day of celebration and receptions honoring Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brock, just home from one of the boldest flights in aviation annals, had a sudden climax last night when Schlee, arising to speak at a banquet in his and Brock's honor, collapsed and was carried from the banquet hall.

Still tired and near exhaustion from their 23-day race against time, 195 hours of which were spent in the air in an attempt to set a new record time for encircling the earth, Brock and Schlee were guests of honor at a banquet, attended by more than 2,000 persons.

Brock, called upon to speak, said his companion and sponsor of the flight, would tell the story of the trip which ended at Tokio. Schlee arose, spoke a word or two, then fell back into his chair. He was carried from the room. The banquet, whose guests besides Gov. Fred Green and Mayor John W. Smith numbered many industrial leaders, was adjourned. Schlee responded to medical attention and shortly afterwards was removed to his home.

The banquet was the final feature of a welcoming program which began yesterday afternoon when their big yellow plane landed at the Ford airport.

Several thousand persons joined the wives and friends of the two men in the welcome at the flying field. Henry and Edsel Ford took part in short ceremonies. At the City Hall other thousands were gathered. Everywhere the fliers were met with roaring applause.

Both men planned to rest several days, after which they indicated plans may be made for a second attempt to break the present globe encircling record of 28 days.

HERSHFIELD

BUGS BAER Says

THE leather bumpers of the Yanks and Pirates are as evenly matched as curls on a wig. Both teams batted .307 in 153 games. Pittsburgh has eight men over .300 to seven for the Yanks.

The Waner boys collected a combined average of .733 against a total of .728 for Ruth and Gehrig. That makes the Waners five points better than the New York malleteers.

But comparisons sprain their statistics when you step into the home run department. Babe and Gehrig collected 107 home runs while the Waners were knocking only 11 between them.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Pittsburgh Balances that with the bag wallops accumulated by Paul and Lloyd. The brothers got 450 during the season, while Babe and Gehrig smacked 405.

One thing is certain, and that is the Yanks can smear quick pitching. The Pirates have some slow bowlers who can lob them up to the mat. But the fast workers are going to get their hinges knocked loose.

The price makers still quote the Yanks as two-to-one in spite of the fact that a seven-game series is as unreliable as a Mexican election.

It looks as if some of the experts are going to get their opinions scorched.

With two teams batting .307, it looks as if the series will be decided by snappy relief pitching.

The pitchers have about as much chance of getting through nine innings as a gopher has of passing a rattler in a tunnel.

An average of .307 means that each team has nine gorillas swinging fence posts at the plate. It will be no surprise to see a game started by Aldridge, passed on to Cvengros, Meadows, Yde, and finished by Barney Dreyfuss and his son.

The same goes for the Yanks. Jake Ruppert is liable to get into the box score.

The Yanks have nine pitchers against eight for the Pirates. They will need them all.

Winding up the Waner-Ruth business we find that Babe and Gehrig registered 302 runs while the Waner boys got 245.

But all comparisons flop during world series. It is like clocking horses in the Kentucky Derby and then timing the same nags kicking their way out of a burning barn.

On "THE REACTION"

If a man gets "STUCK" in A business CONVERSATION,
Or wants a minute to THINK, and does NOT Want his opponent to KNOW
A CIGAR and laboriously
LIGHTS it.
If he happens to NEED a couple of MINUTES
The cigar, of course,
Becomes TROUBLESOME and Demands CONCENTRATION.
But finally he gets it
GOING and, leaning back,
Will remark CASUALLY:
"You were saying . . . ."
This is what a big BUSINESS man calls
STRATEGY.
But many an eighteen-
Year-old STENOGRAPHER,
On hearing the Pause, looks up
And turns her PRETTY
Soft eyes full upon him
As she THINKS: "The poor
BOOB,' doesn't he know yet
That they ALL do it,
And that he is only
GIVING the other
Man time to get his NUMBER?" And she BOWS
Her marcelled head in PITY.

Death of John Dalzell Removes National Figure

The death of John Dalzell, member of the national House of Representatives from Pittsburgh from 1887 until 1913, marks the passing of a former statesman who achieved country-wide prominence as a foremost adherent of the protective tariff policy. He was of "the Old Guard," politically, and was one of the "Big Four," including Dingley, Payne and Cannon.

No man surpassed Mr. Dalzell in his championship of the protective tariff and few men were as able as he to expound its benefits as he conceived them. Figures to him were as words are to others. To hear him deliver a speech on the tariff was to listen to a bewildering array of statistics flowing from his lips with such rapidity and clearness that it was easy to believe that "figures never lie," especially when presented with such impressive force and earnestness as Mr. Dalzell always had at his command in the days when he was "in the harness."

Following his retirement from Congress the memory of his statesmanship lived in Pittsburgh, his home city, for the interests of which he always fought his best fight. The benefits of his advocacy still endure here in river improvements and the United States Bureau of Mines as well as such industries as were matured through infancy by tariff protection.

Mr. Dalzell towered high among the statesmen of his day. He was a lawyer of great ability also, but it was in the service of his country and his home city that he achieved the greater prominence. The Old Guard passes. Among its greatest figures was John Dalzell.

Mussolini's Visitor

All Roads Now Lead to Rome and MUSSOLINI

TWO RULERS—ONE OF THEM REAL.

Here, in the beautiful Chigi Palace, now occupied by Mussolini, today ruler of Italy, once a fugitive Socialist and agitator, you see the powerful Italian Premier receiving the head of the association of chiefs of Ceylon. The meeting took place in the Victory Salon of the great palace. And the feeling of victory was all on the side of Mussolini, who really rules.

His visitor in the elaborate clothing and decorations has a name to match. It is Silva Wijayasinghe Siriwardene Padikara Mudaliyar.

The big chief from Ceylon, head of the other chiefs, is in reality no ruler, one that holds his position by the grace of Great Britain, whose gunboats could easily land forces that would end his unreal rulership.

Mussolini, on the other hand, is one of the most powerful and absolute rulers of a great nation seen since the ancient days.

He rose to the top, as Napoleon did, after wars of international trouble.

Once a Socialist himself, and a Socialist of the ultra type, jailed for his opinions, Mussolini seized the power just in time to keep the Government of Italy from falling into the hands of his former extremely radical associates.

It was MUSSOLINI OR SOCIALISTIC-COMMUNISM for Italy. A majority of Italians believed that Mussolini, with his autocratic rule, absolute power, was by far the better choice of the two.

It would be interesting to know how Mussolini feels, as he lives in his great palace, telling the King of Italy what to say, and how to say it, issuing orders to the Italian Parliament, which exists merely to obey his (Mussolini's) commands.

If you asked Mussolini that question he probably would say: "I feel as I have always felt. I was made to rule, and I knew it. In the beginning I made a mistake—I thought that I ought to rule in common with the masses of the people and throw out those at the top. I know better now, and realize that I ALONE, at the top, should rule and tell the masses of the people what to do."

Self-Solving Problems

Statistics—and how could we keep house without them?—inform us that a survey just completed shows that there are more pie eaters in this country than gum chewers.

The great American institution, the pie, seems, like the iron hat, to have come to stay. Gum chewing, a more frivolous occupation, has made tremendous strides.

Pie eating causes indigestion, and gum chewing relieves it. Thus many of our great American problems solve themselves.

Garrett P Serviss Says:

The Story of Az Zahra

IN THE magic land of Spain, not far from the wonderful old city of Cordova, is the site and some slight remains of a marvelous Moorish palace, whose construction like that of the famous Taj Mahal, was inspired by love for a woman. It was erected in the tenth century by the Caliph Abderrhaman III, and was named Az Zahra after the favorite lady of his harem. Descriptions of its costly beauty that have come down from Moorish sources, seconded by indications furnished by excavations upon its site, fill the traveler with astonishment and give him a glimpse of the romantic character of Moorish life in Spain in the days of the Caliphate of Cordova, such as plain history does not afford.

The palace of Az Zahra was constructed of the costliest and richest marbles, vari-colored jasper, porphyry and other rare stones, adorned with gold and gems and with that inimitable cell-work of colored stucco and lace-work of exquisite stone, that may be seen in the Cordova mosque and the Alhambra palace. Its vaulted roofs were lined with beautiful mosaics; its alabaster fountains spouted rose water; in the court a basin of black marble was filled with quicksilver, whose sensitive liquid surface glowed like a mirror in the sunshine; columns of rock crystal supported the pavilions; the sleeping apartments were adorned with indescribable splendor; and it is recorded that the road from Cordova to Az Zahra was carpeted with flowers, bordered with magnificent shade trees, and in unshaded parts—left purposely in that state, no doubt—scarlet silk awnings were spread to moderate the blazing sunshine to a red glow, as if the atmosphere had become rubescent.

But the characteristic thing about this wonderful palace and that which, perhaps, was the cause of the peculiar ferocity shown in the manner of its destruction, was a domed structure in the interior, containing a golden statue of the favorite, while around the walls ran a frieze, on which was repeated endlessly, after the Moorish manner of commemorating God, the name "Az Zahra," carved in the picturesque Arabian letters. This was a direct and unforgivable defiance of the Mohammedan prohibition against the representation of the human figure, and though Abderrhaman had dared to commit the offense he could not avert the consequences, and his palace had not stood half a century before fanatical followers of the prophet, acting in the name of a rival caliph who had been exiled in Abderrhaman's time, literally triturated it, pounding its beauties to pieces one by one, so that today scarcely a trace of them remains. Even its magnificent orange gardens were uprooted. It was once partly restored, but soon more completely destroyed, and what was left of its stones were used to build a monastery, which, when abandoned by the monks, was used as a lunatic asylum. That, in turn, has lately been transformed into a pretentious country house.

The fate of this Moorish palace is a striking commentary upon the works of fanaticism. For thoughtful travelers, Spain is the most interesting of the old countries to visit, and it is so partly because nowhere else, perhaps, can such startling examples be found of the results of fanatical prejudice, intolerance, irreflection and reckless violence. The case of Az Zahra must be counted against the Moors, but the indictment of their Christian conquerors is a much longer one.

Fighting Spirit

DON'T carry your boyhood fighting spirit into the world you meet, as a man.

Not to the extent of physically attacking those who antagonize you, anyway.

It takes a fighter to get on in this world, but let it be a spirit of fight, not an actual clinching contact.

There are times when it becomes necessary to fight, and at such times you should make a good job of it, but there are not many such regular fighting occasions.

A fist-fight generally indicates that one or both of the combatants did not have sufficient poise to control the situation. The thug and the pugilist think first of "smashing the face" of the one who angers him.

Would you place yourself in this class?

Would it not fare you better to try to use your brains against those who do you injury, instead of allowing the idea of giving them a beating to get hold of you?

THE Jones family were on holiday, and it had rained every day for a week. They were all very gloomy as they sat in the front room of their boarding house.

Little Jimmy was looking through the window at the downpour when he exclaimed, suddenly, "Oh, look! There's a man carrying a lot of wood! What's he going to do?"

Mr. Jones looked up from his paper.

"I suppose he's going to build an ark!" he said.

Telling Him

"AW, I CAN'T!" whined the young nephew.

"You can't?" answered old Riley Rezzidew sarcastically. "You ain't been hypnotized, have ye, or got a broken leg or the dyspepsy of a wife and mother-in-law to henpeck the energy out o' you; you are not in the poor house or in jail, or bound hand and foot with chains, are ye? In this present Anno Domerni and this Great Land of the Free any whole and healthy man or boy who makes use of the word 'can't,' when referring to any task or duty of everyday life, ought to be arrested for misappropriating other people's property, stealing a word that is the rightful possession of cripples, paupers, prisoners and model husbands."

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, OCT. 5.—A wealthy New York woman recently decided her face needed lifting. Her double chin was stretching into what ball players call a triple and tell-tale puffs balooned under each eye. The beauty specialists had done their best or worst.

There was left only the plastic surgeon's knife. Among her household servants was a faithful woman upon whom Time left similar imprints. The mistress offered her $1,000 to submit to the operation to see what might be done before she underwent the experiment.

The results were not satisfying. Reefs were taken in the chine and eye bags were deflated, but scars were visible and the face was a little out of kilter. The servant received her $1,000, but also a life disfigurement.

It has been estimated some 5,000 women, from flapper to dowager, have undergone this surgical process of rejuvenation in New York in the past year. Many operations proved quite successful, but many others turned out ghastly.

Three women of wealth and some social prominence have exiled themselves to foreign countries because their faces, slit with knives and inflated with paraffine, failed properly to "jell." They left hospitals in bandages and removed them to find scarred and twisted faces.

The wife of a successful mining engineer decided, while her husband was on a mission in South Africa, to have her face surgically remodeled. She went to Paris for the operation and returned to America six weeks later. Five months later he came home.

He bounded up the steps from his taxi, rushed into his home and found a woman in the hallway he did not recognize. He was first shocked, then horrified. The couple had grown children. Today she is in Reno and he is living at his club.

A chorus girl with a nose decidedly retrousse was a fixture for several seasons at the Winter Garden. She was acclaimed for her perky appearance in which her upturned nose played a distinguishing part. It is related her boy friend in a huff one day told her he'd be fonder of her if she didn't have such a "button nose." She decided to have it whittled into an aquiline curve. It so disfigured her she lost not only her job but her b. f. and is now a waitress in an upper Broadway quick lunch.

Ladies, however, have no corner on vanity. There are several aging boulevardiers who have had their "maps histed." One in particular was so successful he succeeded in convincing a French actress that he was under 40 and married her. He was 62.

Many veteran chorus men have had their faces lifted. Only in this way could they hold their jobs. Out front we think of chorus men as youthful and as a rule they are, but some of the best in the business have white hair dyed black. In the Follies one year was a chorus man of 53 whose daughter 18 had a special dance number. Her father was among the herring hipped lads who grouped about her, smirking and kneeling at her feet.

The sash white vest for dinner clothes has arrived from London and is being worn by some of the bloods. It is merely a band of wide white satin which hooks in the back and fits corset-like. Three were seen at a recent theatrical first night.

A style expert lists New York's five best dressed men as Otto Kahn, Ray Long, Joseph E. Widener, Roy Howard and Ben Ali Haggin.

Mr. Widener, it has been printed, has a London tailor come to New York once a year to measure him for 30 suits.

Saint Francis

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

At the national encampment of the Bohemian Club at Bohemian Grove was held a pageant in honor of St. Francis Assisi, after whom San Francisco was named. Lawrence Tibbett ,of Metropolitan opera fame, sang the leading role, that of St. Francis Assisi. There were 165 characters, all of them played by members of the club.

Saint Francis has always been the one saint of the church of whom I am particularly fond. He represented the spirit of Christianity.

His business was loving. He truly was a great lover and loved everything, including the inanimate objects of nature.

The stories about him are very beautiful, how the birds came to hear him preach and the little wild animals ran to him for refuge. Some men seem to understand and to attract the animals, and Saint Francis was one of them. He spent his whole life in the business of doing good. His one marriage was to espouse her whom he called Lady of Poverty, and his conduct with all men was such as we would expect from a true Christian.

Many of the saints were combative in their nature. Perhaps that was necessary in their time, but this saint devoted himself to the one thing that will eventually save mankind, and that is love.

He even composed a hymn to the sun, speaking of him as our brother Sun, for he claimed kinship to all things that God had made. This is going the evolutionists one better.

Love is a peculiar thing. It is the toughest thing in the world. It will outlast all hate. Suppressed in one place, it will come up in another. It performs herculean tasks, tasks that are impossible.

It did away with human slavery among civilized peoples and with duelling. In time it will do away with war.

No man can make a mistake by committing himself to love and taking such a man as Saint Francis Assisi for his patron.

Douglas Malloch says:

"Steel will break or steel will hold,
but love is never broken.
Even when the heart is cold, the final word is spoken.
Threads of gold may seem to rend,
but love will yet discover
That nothing's final to a friend nor ended to a lover."

The Rhyming Optimist

Gay October

OCTOBER casts her golden nets across a drowsing earth that, drugged with dreams, so soon forgets the Summer's bloom and mirth. For, lovelier than Summer lies this land of gold and red, with mellow mist and haze that rise from fields whence life is fled. Fairer than any Summer sky, than Summer fields more bright, these vistas rise to greet the eye, an aureate delight; no trace of sorrow that the year so soon must pass away, no hint of any shade of fear of Winter's grim array. But beauty reigns on vales and hills: October is so gay—before her smiles the spirit thrills with every golden day. October casts her shining nets across a dreaming world, so fair a place that man forgets sweet Summer's flags are furled!

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

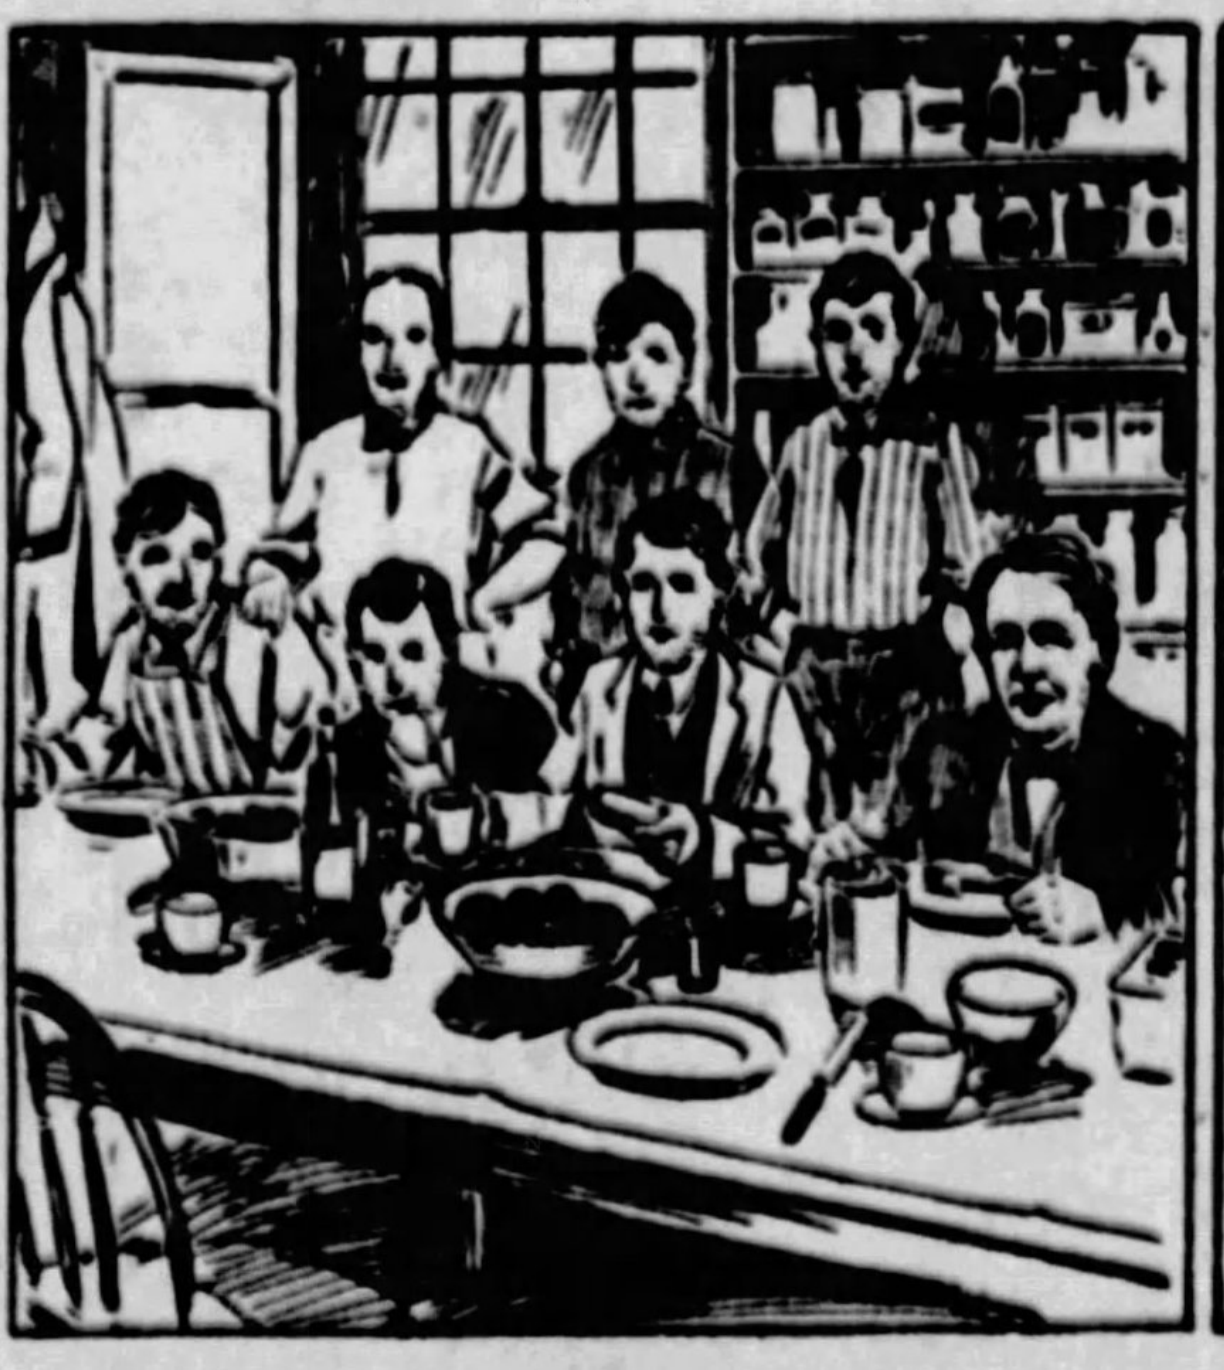
WHEN Edison said he was going to hunt for the ways and means to make a good storage battery, perhaps even he didn't realize what a job he was tackling. But he thrives on tough problems. "Secrets have to be long-winded and roost high if they want to get away when the 'Old Man' goes hunting for them," said an assistant.



WHEN trailing Nature's secrets, hours meant nothing to Edison and his laboratory staff. Night was the same as day to them, but, so far as we know, nothing has been told about the attitude of wives toward husbands on the famous "insomnia squad." Here is the group at midnight lunch with their democratic "boss."

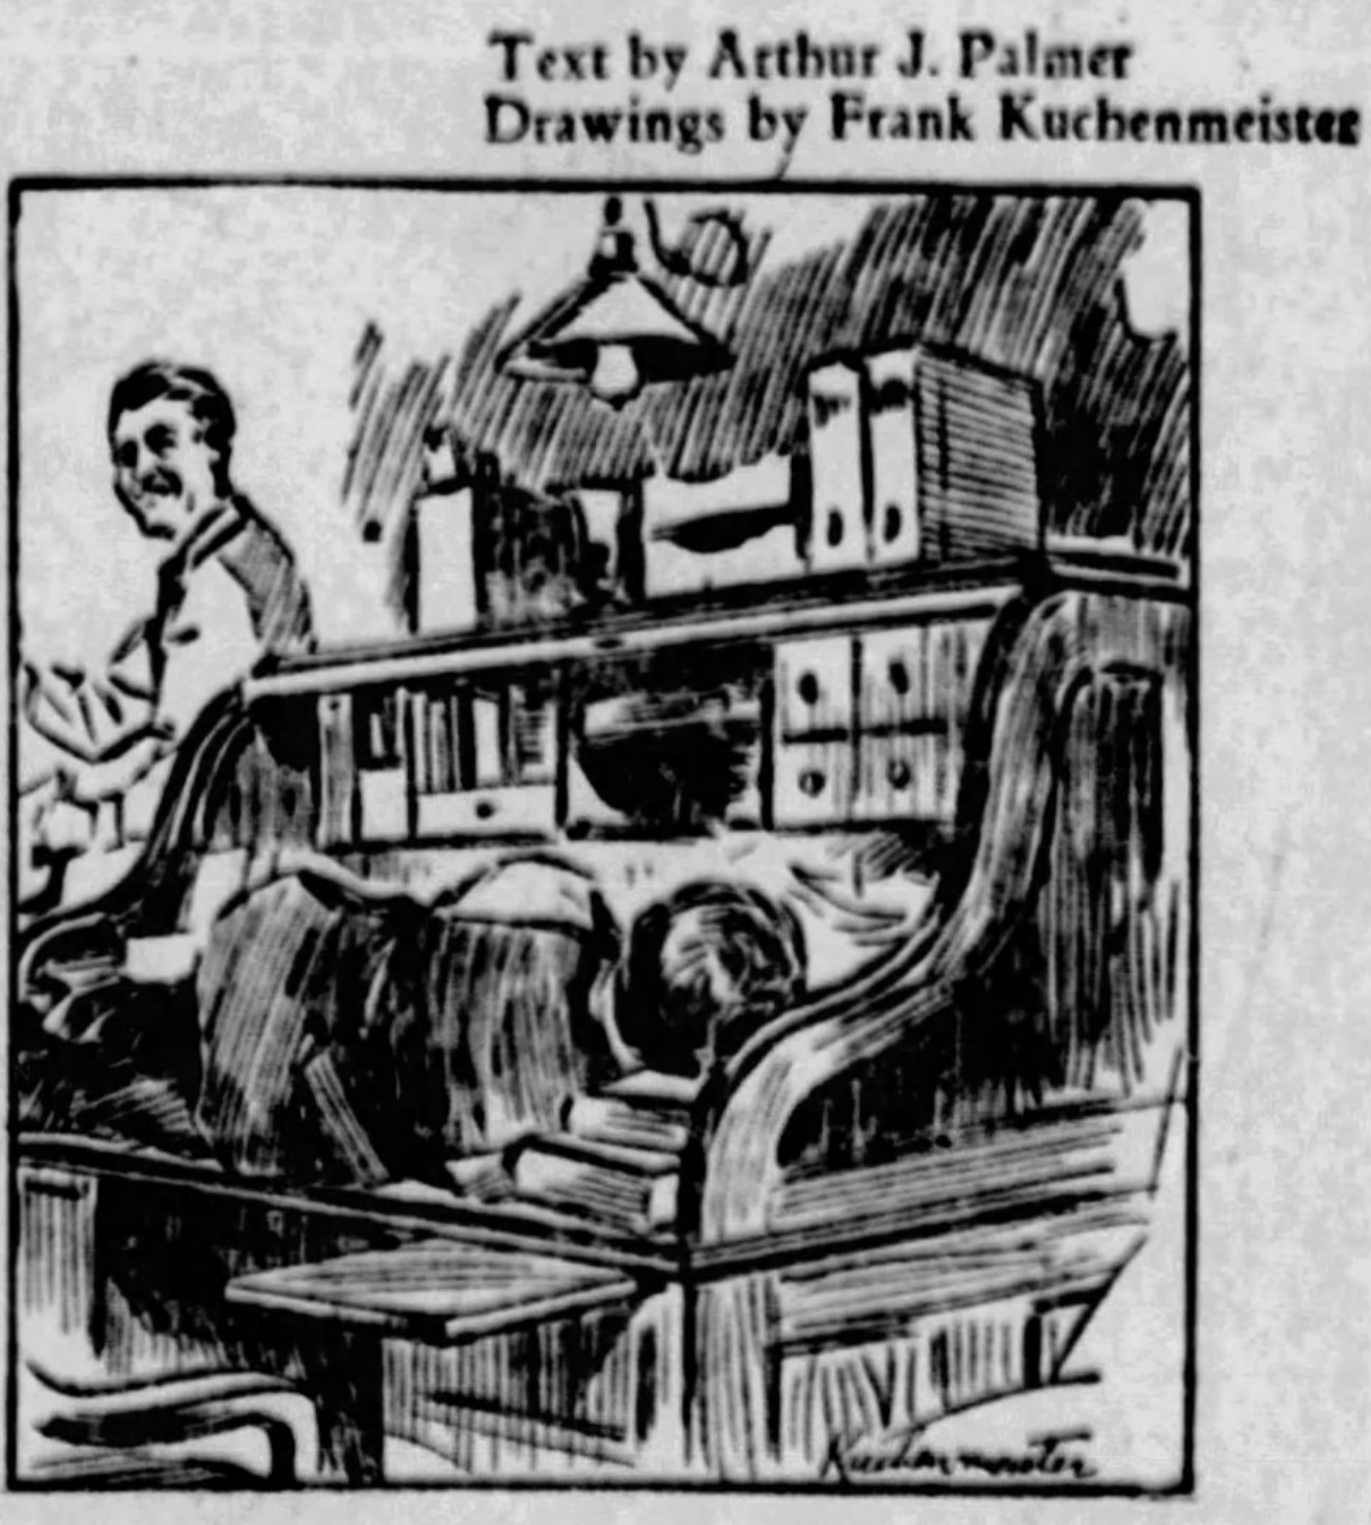
THERE were two lighting plants at the laboratory. About 1 a. m. it was necessary to switch the lights over from one generator to the other. As the lights grew dim, Edison would close his eyes as though asleep. As the lights grew bright again he would [illegible]



AFTER a long stretch of toil on the storage battery, Edison would crawl into a roll-top desk, curl up and take a nap with Watt's "Dictionary of Chemistry" as his pillow. The "boys" used to say that [illegible]
